

Fall is the open season for the Alpinist's risky sport. From the latter part of September until the first heavy snow it is at its best. Here is the leader of a party with a vista of jagged peaks before him after a perilous ascent in the Beitschhorn region of the Valais, Switzerland. © Herbert Photos.

A typical Alpine panorama rewards a party of climbers after conquering the Dufour-Spitze of the Mount Rosa, in the Valais. They rest on a perch 15,200 feet above the sea. © Herbert Photos.

They go in for novel pets out in Hollywood. Dorothy Sebastian's little bear, of course, is named Teddy.

A screenland interpretation of the approaching eve of witches and eerie things. The back-fence twins are Marceline Day and Josephine Dunn.

Old Dobbin shares his lunch with the park pigeons.

When an Indian rajah rides out for a state call he does it in the correct style. The elaborate elephant-drawn coach is scarcely a match for the pompous paraphernalia worn by the elephants. © Herbert Photos.

Fountains of light in the background of a great city at night. The fountain effect is produced by the searchlights of battleships playing in San Francisco Harbor. © P. & A. Photos.