New York Paper States He Has Been Definitely Chosen Attorney General.

Col. William J. Donovan, assistant to Attorney General Sargent and close friend of President-elect Hoover, has definitely been selected to be Attorney General in the Hoover cabinet, the New York Herald-Tribune says today on excellent authority.

"Such an attitude would be typical of the practical Hoover viewpoint. Political leaders knew long before Mr. Hoover even was nominated that he would not be influenced by political consideration in picking the key man of his administration, but would appoint them solely on the basis of their fitness for office and the programs he has in mind for inauguration during the next four years. The choice cabinet phims for New York, however, undoubtedly will tremendously increase Mr. Hoover's prestige.

"As regards the next Secretary of War, it can be stated definitely that if Secretary Davis is not retained he undoubtedly will be given an important diplomatic appointment abroad, possibly being made the United States Ambassador to Great Britain. Measure" in Minority Report.

Filing a minority report on the Lehlbach pay bill which was recently reported out favorably by the House civil service committee, Representative Carl G. Bachman of West Virginia, a member of the committee, yesterday branded the Lehlbach measure as "a demotion bill and not a bill to increase salaries."

He objected to both sections of the bill, but more particularly to that which yould give the Personnel Classification Board more power, which he declared would result in many demotions throughout the Government of some of the most valued employes.

Discussing the section of the Lehlbach measure which adds a step to the top of the grades to make the number of steps the same as they were in the world, far and near.

The radio public will be given opinion. The radio public will be given opinion. The radio public will be given opinion. An amendment to the section which added the extra grade should have been put on, he explained, if it is intended to give promotions to employes. In the Brookhart bill, introduced in the Senate, there is a mandatory clause providing that heads of departments shall promote the employes who failed to receive an increase in salary the equivalent of two steps, or salary rates, under the Welch act.

Says McCarl Not to Blame.

Mr. Bachman also declares that blame for any inequalities for adminis-tration of the Welch act rests with the tration of the Weich act rests with the language of the act, and Congress, and not with Controller General McCarl, who has been sharply scored by Chairman Lehlbach for his interpretation of the Welch act.

the Welch act.

Criticizing granting of what he claims is additional power to the Personnel Classification Board never given in the original classification act, the minority report declared "that if these new powers and functions were put into effect by the board there is no question but that there will result wholesale reductions in present salary rates to a tion but that there will result wholesale reductions in present salary rates to a large number of the Government's most efficient, most experienced and most essential employes in the higher (professional, scientific and administrative) grades, as well as possible ultimate reductions to the employes onstitute the backbone of the Government structure. It is all too hard now for the Government to retain their services." While the bill has for its purpose the obtaining of small additional increases to certain of the employes, the minority report continued, the measure "actually gives no certain increase to any, and undoubtedly will result in demotions for a great many. It thus can be termed a demotion bill, and not a bill to increase salaries."

Board's Power Explained.

Flatly objecting to enactment of the measure with its "additional" powers for the board, the minority report declared that the matter of "extending, enlarging or in any way changing the powers, duties and functions of the Personnel Classification Board is of such far-reaching import that it should not be tacked on a bill which has for its main purpose the revision of salary came to the attention of the Senate its main purpose the revision of salary rates, but should be made a matter of separate legislation so that ample time and full opportunity may be had for all concerned to properly study and thoroughly understand the various problems of personnel classification in the civil service of the Government."

"Nowhere in the Welch act," said Mr. Bachman, in his report, "can anything be found which will in any way decrease, take away from, or repeal any of the functions or powers of the Personnel Classification Board.

Personnel Classification Board.

"After the Welch act was passed," he said, "the controller general of the United States rendered an opinion as to the intent of the administrative provision of the act. His ruling evidently did not meet with the approval of the Personnel Classification Board, nor did it satisfy those employes who, under the ruling, were advanced only one salary step instead of two, this situation being brought about because there was a reduction of steps in the grades in the Welch act from seven to six. In other words, there were seven steps in certain grades under the original classification act of 1923, and the Welch act reduced these steps to six.

Amendment Is Urged.

Amendment Is Urged.

"From a legal point of view, the con-troller general made the only ruling with respect to the administrative pro-vision of the Welch act that was possible for him to make according to the provisions of this act. The Congress sible for him to make according to the provisions of this act. The Congress—not the controller general—is responsible for the language used in the act.

"Mainly to correct the inequalities brought about by the operation of the Welch act, a number of bills were introduced at this session of Congress, adding another step in those grades where many of the employes only received one step up, for the purpose of uniformly giving each employe two steps up in the grades affected. This also is the intent of H. R. 16643 (Lehlbach bill) in section 2 thereof.

"Therefore, there is no objection to section 2 of the Lehlbach bill, providing a proper amendment to the bill is made directing some agency or agencies of the Government to put the increases therein provided, into effect on or before April 1, 1929, and that there may be some authority for the creation of a deficiency in order to take care of these increases.

The bill authorizes the Federal Board for Vocational Education to provide for the rehabilitation and return to employment of any disabled resident of Washington. It is similar to the Federal law on the subject passed in 1920.

The measure authorizes a Federal appropriation of $15,000 annually, but provides that this sum shall be available only when matched by an equal appropriation from District funds. Any appropriation from District funds. Any resident of the District who, by reason of a physical defect or infirmity, is totally or partially incapacitated for remunerative occupation, would be eli-gible for rehabilitation.

In reporting the bill to the Senate, the committee on educe and labor stated that "this rehalf work, if set up and carried on in the District of Columbia, would provide a Lational laboratory for research in discovering ways of rehabilitating disabled persons, and thus enable the States to have the herefit of these studies and investigation. benefit of these studies and investiga-tions."

In further explanation of the bill,

the committee reported:

"It has been shown quite conclusively that a person injured in industry can be rehabilitated for less than it would cost to maintain him as a public charge. The committee calls attention to the fact that injured United States employes who are granted. employes who are granted compensa-tion receive two-thirds of their salary with a maximum limitation on the sal-ary of $175 a month, thus providing the sum of $116.66 a month for the maximum compensation. This sum itself, if paid for two months, would pay the average cost of rehabilitating these disabled people, and therefore the Congress might expect that this program would not only be of humanitarian would not only be of humanitarian tharacter, but also a direct economy in the use of Federal funds."

Florida Farmers Are Understood to Have Assurances of Tariff Protection.

BY J. RUSSELL YOUNG, Staff Correspondent of The Star. BELLE ISLE, MIAMI, Fla., February

-President-elect Hoover is understood to have given assurance of sufficient tariff protection against the importation of vegetables from Mexico and Cuba to cause Florida farmers to look forward cause Florida farmers to look forward to a happy and prosperous future.

Mr. Hoover has been represented by some of those interested in the growing of vegetables for the early markets as recognizing that the future agricultural progress of Florida depends upon tariff protection. He has been reminded that prosperity of the future is menaced by cheap labor of both Mexico and Cuba, more especially the former, and has been told that unless the Florida farmers are given some of the protection afforded other industries they will be compelled to give up farming.

Tariff Is State Issue.

Tariff Is State Issue.

Tariff protection, or lack of it, has been a principal political issue in Florida. It is an issue supported by Democrats as well as Republicans. The fact that Mr. Hoover is understood to have given assurances of his support when tariff revision is taken up in the forthcoming extra session of Congress does not imply that there is anything political in his motives. Those who have discussed the subject with him know that he looks upon this as an economic problem, and recognizing that agriculthat he looks upon this as an economic problem, and recognizing that agriculture is the backbone of prosperity in a State like Florida, there is every good reason why he should want to assist this State in its advancement.

Local Republican leaders are happy in the belief that their party's prospects are brightened as a result of the State's cry for tariff protection. They admit that the only hope for Republicans to hold Florida in the Republican column is to concentrate their activities Pair Had Traveled 5,000 column is to concentrate their activities on obtaining a tariff assuring a profit able market for the State's agricultura

Probably the most colorful incident of the morning was the presentation of a truck load of products raised in four counties in the Southern section of Florida. The gift, from the Farmers' Curb Market of Miami, was presented by four young girls attired in overalls, and wearing broad straw hats.

Among the gifts were flowers of various kinds, vegetables, fruits, meat, chickens, squabs, eggs and ducks.

Mr. Hoover also received a fishing rod from Capt. Stewart Miller, on behalf of the Charter Boatmens' Association of Miami.

Among persons received by Mr. Hoover were Ballard Dunn of Omaha

Mr. Hoover left early this afternoon for the West Coast of Florida, where he will participate Monday in the celebration of Thomas A. Edison's eighty-second birthday anniversary, and afterward where he will fish in the Gulf of Mexico for tarpon. He is not expected to return to Belle Isle before late Wednesday or Thursday morning. The Saunterer will arrive at the boat landing on Mr. Edison's place about 10 o'clock Monday morning. The President-elect and his party will be met at the dock by Mr. and Mrs. Edison, Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone, close friends of Mr. Edison. Soon after the birthday party at Mr. Edison's home Mr. and Mrs. Hoover and their party will return to the Saunterer and head for the fishing grounds.
