Albert C. Baker, who shot and killed his wife April 2 and yesterday surrendered to police, was held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury today.

Baker was not called to the stand not were his two children, Jackle and Victor, who saw Baker kill their mother, Mrs. May Baker, in their basement apartment, at 807 O street Detective Sergt. George E. Darnell gave a brief resume of the confession Baker wrote for police yesterday.

Policeman Testifies.

Only two other witnesses testified.

Illiams Clarence B. Wood, of the cond precinct, testified that he was spatched to the O street address, ere he learned from the elder boy, ctor, that his father had shot his other. Dr Samuel Taft of Emergency spital, who pronounced the woman ad, testified that the woman did not have a statement, since she was unmiscious. Sergt. Darnell testified that an un in their basement apartment, 807 O street.

In his confession to police yesterday. Baker said he bought the gun after he heard rumors that his wife was keeping company with another man. He said he intended to accost the man and strike him—if he retaliated, he said, he intended to kill him. Later he tossed the gun into a clump of woods near Georgetown, he declared.

Yesterday police took Baker to the spot where he was supposed to have thrown the gun away. He couldn't find it—neither could the police.

Baker nearly bumped into Inspector William S. Shelby, chief of detectives, when he walked in to give himself up yesterday. The chief was on his way to lunch when Baker entered the front door of police headquarters. Shelby recognized him from pictures in the police files. He stepped aside to let him pass and then followed him up the stairs to the main bureau, where he gave himself up to Lieut. Charles Weber.

GAS DISTRIBUTION Commission Replies to E. C. Finney's Complaint Against

High Pressure. The Public Utilities Commission in letter to Edward C. Finney, solicitor to day the situation in Washington regarding high pressure in gas mains and badly adjusted appliances causing high gas bills has generally improved as a result of efforts made by the Washington Gas Light Co. Mr. Finney has complained that, since the reduction of rates ordered by the new organization of the company, his bills had almost doubled, although he used less gas than before. The com-mission's letter in reply said: "We have made a very thorough study of the situation this Winter and be-lieve the results of these studies have been very beneficial. This study was started by making an intensive pressure survey on the city and from that sursurvey on the city and from that survey the company has made many rearrangements in their distribution system."

This has resulted in a much more uniform pressure condition over the city and spots where abnormally high at pressures within the limits set by the commission.

"There has been going on for some time a house-to-house canvass in the two territories productive of the greatest number of complaints. Wherever the inspectors found an appliance in need of adjustment they did not leave it until it operated satisfactorily. The commission is now compiling the results of the house-to-house canvass and from these reports expects to learn considerable as to the functioning of appliances in the customers' premises.

"The company is already taking steps to correct the maladjustment of appliances installed by others than themselves. They have started a training ances installed by others than them-selves. They have started a training school at their service station at which plumbers or others who have to do with the installation of gas-burning appliances for stores and jobbers are given a course of instruction to enable them to properly adjust the equipment which they install.

Other Links Planned.

The company is making plans to install a number of connecting links in its distribution system during this Summer to have a better distribution of gas during the coming Winter.

"All of the above are general results of this investigation and are an outgrowth of the studies made of specific complaints."

William Wolfe Smith, chief counsel of the Veterans' Bureau, asked District Supreme Court today to dismiss a suit filed recently by John E. Smalling, World War veteran, against Smith, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and the disbursing officer of the bureau to prevent payment of $187.50 monthly to Smith as disability compensation. Smith now receives this compensation in addition to his annual salary of $9,000 as chief of the bureau's legal staff.

Smalling claimed Smith's war service consisted of not more than six months in an Army non-combatafit unit and that Smith had not received any injury entitling him to disability compensation.

D. C. BOUNDARY DISPUTED

The United States Supreme Court has granted permission to the State of Virginia to file a brief, as friend of court, in the pending dispute as to whether the District of Columbia boundary line is at low or high water mark on the Virginia side of the Potomac River.

The court is scheduled to hear arguments in the case the latter part of this week or early next week. The litigation started between the Washington Airport, Inc., and the Smoot Sand and Grayel Corporation. The Federal Government is taking part in presenting the Issues to the Supreme Court because of the relation the boundary question has to Federal improvements on the Virginia side of the river.

Faculty Numbers 250.

The faculty and office staff number almost 250 employed in the home work of the college and in extension teaching and the work they do is varied and far-reaching, embracing the studies, of the common school, the industrial school and the Bible training institute and theological seminary.

Industrial training is one of the features of the school. The curriculum includes day and night sessions, the latter being intended for students too poor to pay their way through college. Considerable stress is placed upon the mechanical industries, and this department of the college covers everything from electrical engineering to shoemaking and the commoner trades. Attention also is paid to the industrial education of women in line with their lives. The extension work, carried on through the Tuskegee Negro Conference, is largely directed to practical and industrial ends, in which agriculture receives special consideration.

collected and that no child at present is going without the lunch.
Declining to make any public statements herself, Mrs. Gladys Parsons, chairman of the Special Milk Fund Committee of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, announced through Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, that "no requests" had been made for relief by any of the parent-teacher associations for financial aid in providing for the needy children of their jurisdictions. Mrs. Parsons said further, through Mr. Kramer, that the central relief fund for the white schools had reached approximately $330.

Schools Request Aid.

Schools Request Aid.

At the same time school officials were in possession of filled-out questionnaires from all elementary schools. Eight white schools expressed a need for a total of $331, while six of the colored schools reported they needed a total of $310.90. The questionnaires were sent to the schools by officials at the Frank-lin Building March 25.

"Mrs. Parsons saws size here received."

Colored Group Cellects $189.

George A. Parker, president of the ederation of Parent-Teacher Associations, the colored equivalent of the rectration of Parent-Teacher Associations, the colored equivalent of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, announced that $189 had been collected by the federation and that while that fund would be used to relieve any overtaxed Parent-Teacher Association, all but one of the local bodies had reported ability to carry their own burden. The one needy school, he said, requires assistance in providing not only the free lunches, but also free shoes to poor children, and the $189 will be used for that purpose.

Advised by The Star that eight colored schools had expressed a need for a total of $310.90, Mr. Parker said that while that may have represented the situation when the questionnaire was sent out in March, he was convinced that "the needs have been spread out and alleviated among the various associations since March 23.

Committee Reports.

Reports of committees were made at the meeting as follows:

By Miss Louise McGuire, chairman of the Family Welfare Committee; Elwood Street, chairman of the Social Service Exchange Committee; Miss A. Patricia Morss, chairman of child Welfare Committee, Miss Soli Baker, who reported for the chairman of the Recreation Committee, Linn C. Drake; Miss Gertrude H. Bowling, chairman of the Health Committee; Oscar Leonard, who reported for the chairman of the Committee on Transients, Mrs. John J. O'Connor, and by John Ihlder, chairman of the Housing Committee. Not Seeking Publicity.

Asked by The Star whether any money from the central relief fund had been given to any local Parent-Teacher Association, Mis. Parsons replied that the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers did not want any publicity. She added that all statements concerning the work of the congress must be made at the Franklin Administration Building by school system officers. Pressed again for a reply as to whether a single dollar had been expended for relief, Mrs. Parsons said:

"Well, you know we've had a holiday and I've been away and really can't say anything to you. If you were a school official instead of a newspaper reporter I might be able to tell you something."

Mr. Kramer then telephoned Mrs. Parsons and relayed to The Star what she said. He explained that Mrs. Parsons had told him that no school has asked for any aid yet. It was at this time that Mr. Kramer said the school principals "evidently think these questionnaires are requests for money."

Asked if any money had yet been spent, Mr. Kramer said he didn't know, but added that Mrs. Parsons and some of her colleagues are meeting at the Franklin Administration Building late today. Not Seeking Publicity.
