

DEMOCRATS TO FAVOR SOUTH

Most of House Committee Chairmanships Would Go to Seven States.

BY WILL F. KENNEDY.

Should the Democrats organize the House at the opening of the seventy-second Congress in December it will mean not only the election of the Speaker and floor leader, but the chairmanships of at least 30 of the committees, of which probably seven would go to Texas.

While a series of decisions since the last Congress closed have given the Democrats a present majority of one, the official standing being, Democrats, 214; Republicans, 210; Farmer-Labor, one, and vacancies, seven, it must not be overlooked that all of these vacancies probably will be filled before Congress meets in December. Neither Republican nor Democratic leaders expect to see any overthrows in any of the vacant districts—that is, Republicans will probably be elected to the House of Representatives and Democrats to fill Democratic vacancies. Vigorous campaigns are under way, but no further change in party lines is anticipated.

The one chance for Democratic control seems to be whether Stanley H. Kunz, Democrat, will be seated from the eighth Illinois district, or whether Peter C. Granata, Republican, will be seated. The Democrats claim this seat by virtue of a court decision in favor of Kunz, but the Republicans claim merely gives Kunz the right to make a contest before the House itself for the seat which belongs to Granata by virtue of a certificate of election issued to him following the election last year.

13 Deaths Since Election.

When the elections were held last November, the result was: Republicans, 218; Democrats, 216; Farmer-Labor, 1. Since then there have been 13 deaths, a record-breaking number.

Of the seven vacancies, five will be filled by elections on November 3—the eighth Illinois district, or whether Peter C. Granata, Republican, will be seated. The Democrats claim this seat by virtue of a court decision in favor of Kunz, but the Republicans claim merely gives Kunz the right to make a contest before the House itself for the seat which belongs to Granata by virtue of a certificate of election issued to him following the election last year.

It is also probable that, while there will be a sort of free-for-all contest in the Republican caucus with favored sons of half a dozen or more States put forward as candidates, after a few complimentary ballots the fight will close down to between Tilson of Connecticut and Snell of New York. After that contest is decided—and it may be by the election of a third or compromise candidate—it is a pretty safe conclusion that the Republican membership will vote solidly for the Republican candidate whoever he may be.

Garner and Byrns.

If the Democrats should happen to hold control, Representative John N. Garner of Texas will be elected Speaker, and probably Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, ranking Democrat on the Appropriations Committee will be made floor leader. This would take Garner, the ranking Republican, from Ways and Means, and Byrns, the ranking man from Appropriations.

Under the seniority rule at least 30 of the committee chairmanships would go to representatives from Southern States.

Out of scarcely a dozen committees on which Northern Representatives may be chairman under the seniority rule, a number have Southern men next in line, so that in the adjustment where some veteran Democrat is by seniority entitled to his choice between several chairmanships, a Southern Democrat who stands in second place may get a chairmanship. For example, Representative Loring M. Black, Jr., of New York, is in line for chairmanship of three committees and second in line on several others. He must choose, if the Democrats are in control, between Education, Claims and Revision of Laws. If he prefers the chairmanship of Education then the chairmanship of Claims would go to Representative J. Bayard Clark of North Carolina.

Several Democratic members would thus have their choice of several chairmanships: Latham of Texas either Patents or Public Buildings and Grounds; Jeffers of Alabama, either Education of the President, etc., or Civil Service, and Rankin of Mississippi, either Census or World War Veterans Legislation.

Texas and Alabama.

Under the seniority rule, if the Democrats are in control, Texas is expected to have at least six, and probably one or two more chairmanships: Agriculture, Marvin Jones; Appropriations, James P. Buchanan; Judiciary, Hatten W. Sumner; Patents or Public Buildings and Grounds, Fritz G. Latham; Rivers and Harbors, Joseph J. Mansfield.

But Alabama will come a close second with five probable chairmanships: banking and currency, Henry B. Steagall; civil service or election laws, Edward B. Almon; and roads, Edward B. Almon, and war claims, Miles C. Algood.

North Carolina, Mississippi and Georgia would be entitled to four chairmanships each and South Carolina to three.

This would give to seven Southern States the chairmanships of 28 of the biggest committees in the House. The probable lineup on committee chairmanships under the seniority practice of giving the chairmanship to the Democrat who has served longest on the committee is as follows:

Accounts—Representative Lindsay C. Warren of North Carolina.

Agriculture—Representative Marvin Jones of Texas.

Appropriations—Representative James P. Buchanan of Texas.

Banking and currency—Representative Henry B. Steagall of Alabama.

Census—Representative John E. Rankin of Mississippi.

Civil Service—Representative Lamar Jeffers of Alabama.

Claims—Representative Loring M. Black, Jr., of New York.

Coinage, weights and measures—Representative Edgar Howard of Nebraska.

Disposition of useless executive papers—Representative Robert A. Green of Florida.

District of Columbia—Representative Christopher D. Sullivan of New York is first in line, but is expected to give way to Mrs. Mary T. Norton of New Jersey.

Education—Representative Loring M. Black, Jr., of New York.

Election of President, Vice President and Representatives in Congress—Representative Lamar Jeffers of Alabama.

Elections No. 1—Representative Edward E. Edick of Tennessee.

Elections No. 2—Representative John J. Douglas of Massachusetts.

Elections No. 3—Representative John H. Kerr of North Carolina.

Enrolled Bills—Representative Mell O. Underwood of Ohio.

Lithiumum on Foreign Affairs.

Expenditures in the Executive Departments—Representative Alford H. Gasque of South Carolina.

Food Control—Representative Riley J. Wilson of Louisiana.

Foreign Affairs—Representative J. Charles Linthicum of Maryland.

Reviews and News of Washington's Theaters.

"The Woman Between"
Is Played by Lily Damita.

"The Woman Between" is a play of many moods. Lily Damita has ample opportunity to use them in "The Woman Between," currently being exhibited at the Rialto. As the exotic wife of a rich business man, she falls in love with her stepson, who runs a dressmaking establishment, and dashes back and forth between European capitals, and is about the most testy, less woman who ever occupied a man's home.

Eventually, after she realizes that her husband is a man, she falls in love with him, and then she falls in love with him again, in a house where the Mediterranean is the front lawn.

Miss Damita, whose methods of embellishing the stage success "Sons of Guns" raised her to particular heights, is much more credible when she laughs than when she weeps. The director in this has made her pose like a clothes model.

Futurism, although she meant not to get along in the household, is a little reason why she should slide around like a panther and why her husband's friends should be alarmed at her. Her costumes are reminiscent of Lenore Ulric's Lulu Belle. Miss Damita is occasionally comely, and, but for her slouching, she is a good actress. All of which is to say that the film lacks the spark of life and the blood of reality.

"Road to Reno," at the Earle, Vivid Pictures Divorce.

RENO is painted with all the colors that seem necessary to give the impression of a rendezvous for persons who have but the one in mind—to seek pleasure and a sort of recreation—in the week's attraction at the Earle Theater. The vivid reproduction of the surging crowd, shaking off one set of bonds and taking others which are untested, has no place for business or professional men, only the making of divorcees. Neighboring Hollywood has had no difficulty in understanding the spirit and has performed well in putting the "Road to Reno" on the screen and there can serious thoughts be made evident—when remorse and indignation come to plague the divorcees in new dress for domestic life. Even the hotel clerk and his associate telephone operator are pictured as cynics, to whom life is but a procession of married and unmarried.

Indiana Senator Predicts G. O. P. Minority and Garner Representative Speaker.

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., October 24.—Senator James E. Watson predicted here yesterday that the Democrats will organize the House of Representatives in the next session of Congress and that Representative John N. Garner, Democrat, Texas, will be the next speaker.

Senator Watson pointed out the recent death of Representative Fletcher Hale, Republican, New Hampshire, left the Democrats leading the Republicans in the House by 214 to 213 members.

The senior Indiana Senator stopped here en route to Green Castle where he addressed the student body at DePauw University this morning.

Scholastic Press Convention Hears James H. Furry—Awards Announced.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., October 24.—Delegates to the seventh annual Scholastic Press Convention, held at Washington and Lee University tonight, heard aspects of international journalism discussed by James H. Furry, vice president of the United Press Association.

America has become the news gatherer of the world, Mr. Furry said. He added that this is a compliment to the efficiency and the neutrality of the United States and that this condition should contribute to international understanding and cordiality.

Prof. O. W. Fiegel, acting director of the Washington and Lee School of Journalism, presided at the banquet and presented 12 cups to representatives of high school publications which had been judged superior in four classes, graded according to enrollments.

A bronze plaque given by the local chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity, was awarded to William W. E. Glass, High School, Lynchburg, winner of the current contest, and the fraternity also made Mr. Furry an honorary member.

In the A classification, including the largest schools, the cup was awarded to John Marshall High School of Richmond, while E. C. Glass High School, Lynchburg; George Washington High School, Danville, and Central High School, Loudoun, Md., were winners in the B, C and D divisions, respectively.

John Lee Pratt Buys Residence From Col. D. B. Devore—Often Visited by Washington.

By the Associated Press.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., October 24.—Chatham, one of Virginia's most historic and beautiful estates, has been purchased by John Lee Pratt of Fredericksburg and New York, vice president of the General Motors Corporation, who will take immediate possession.

The handsome estate was sold by Col. Daniel B. Devore, U. S. A., retired, of Fredericksburg and Washington, who occupied it as a summer home. Col. Devore purchased it some years ago from Mark S. Devore, a political writer, who lived there for several years.

Mr. Pratt, a native of King George County, is owner of Sherwood Forest Farms, a large estate in Stafford, a few miles distant from Chatham, and purchased it from him two years ago.

Situated on Stafford Heights overlooking Fredericksburg, Chatham was built in 1728 by William Fitzhugh, early Virginia overlord. It was named for Fitzhugh's friend and champion of the colonies, William Pitt, Earl of Chatham.

In the early life of Virginia it was an important gathering place. George Washington was a frequent visitor to the place, which adjoined the farm where he spent his boyhood, and in his diaries are frequent mention of visits to the Pittsburgh home. Martha Dandridge Custis, later Washington's wife, was a frequent visitor, and her granddaughter, Mary Custis, who married Gen. Robert E. Lee, was courted at Chatham by the young Army officer. Chatham during the Civil War was used frequently as a hospital and a lookout post.
