OF INDUSTRY GAINS

Trend Is Toward Medium-Sized
Cities and Metropolitan Fringes.

The proposal to decentralize industry offers little promise of success, according to Daniel Creamer, who has completed a study of population redistribution for the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania.

der the direction of Dr. Carter Goodrich, was released yesterday through the university.

The report says the Government, in fostering decentralization of factories to small towns, would be bucking the tide of natural trends. It was pointed out the relative shrinkage in wage jobs from 1919 to 1933 was the greatest in towns of less than 10,000 population.

The findings of Creamer's survey, which reveal that industry has been moving to medium-sized cities and to the fringes of the metropolitan areas, will be amplified by a later publication of the study of population redistribution that will attempt to make more definite predictions regarding the movement of particular industries.
