AFL Federal Workers Suggest 30-Hour Postwar Work Week

A 30-hour Government work week, effective with V-J Day, to insure more jobs in the Federal service for returning servicemen, was proposed yesterday by the Government Employees' Council of the American Federation of Labor. Representing 19 affiliated unions with a reported membership of 300,000 Federal employees, the council advocated a "gradual" reduction in the Government workweek until the 30-hour level was reached. Before the 30-hour limit is reached, the present workweek could be cut to 40 hours whenever the war effort would allow such a move, the council suggested. If jobs are to be provided for every one in the postwar period, the Government must blaze the trail, the council stated. In suggesting its plan. Under the proposal two hours would be taken off each present eight-hour day. No reduction in present basic pay rates is proposed. For a limited time after V-J Day, it was conceded, there may be a few agencies needing to carry on with a 44 or 48-hour wartime week. Including some War and Navy bureaus. The proposal is in line with AFL policy during the depression days of the 1930s for a shorter workweek to spread out the work. In case it is found that agencies do not have the power to shorten the workweek, the council suggested legislation to this effect be enacted by Congress.

Committee to Survey Restaurant Equipment

The Hotel Advisory Committee to the food inspection division of the Health Department will survey manufacturers of kitchen and dining room equipment on developments expected after the war to aid sanitation, the department announced yesterday. The committee has discussed future plans for model kitchens to aid the department in its efforts to make Washington hotel restaurants a standard of sanitation, which members hope will be the highest in the country. The group also will meet with architects and engineers. Members of the committee are Augustus Gurnford, manager, Harrington Hotel, chairman; A. B. Merriam, manager, Roger Smith; Daniel Watley, manager, Fairfax Hotel; S. W. Keesee, general manager, New Colonial Hotel, and Arthur J. Harnett, executive secretary, Washington Hotel Association. Health Officer George C. Ruhland said he was "highly pleased" with the progress made in food sanitation and the co-operation being received from the industries involved.

Yank Who Lost Hand In Ardennes to Sing

ing over the great responsibilities of this office. "Such matters as the continuation of war financing, the tax enforcement drive, revenue legislation, and many other problems call for prompt decisions. My successor should be given the opportunity to make these decisions, since it will become his duty to carry them out. "These considerations are given added weight by the possibility of a recess of the Senate, which would delay Judge Vinson's confirmation. "Accordingly, I urge that you appoint my successor at your earliest convenience, and make my resignation effective upon his appointment and qualification." The President's reply, dated today, follows: "I have given careful consideration to your letter of July 13 urging that I send to the Senate immediately the nomination of Judge Vinson as Secretary of the Treasury. "I am inclined to agree with you that for the reasons you mentioned it would be preferable to take this action now instead of waiting for my return from Europe. "I appreciate very much the fine spirit and keen sense you have approached this matter."
