Failure to Improve D. C. Facilities for Tuberculosis Deplored

Charging that the facilities for caring for tuberculosis in the District have not improved since 1940 speakers at a meeting of the District Tuberculosis Association last night in the National Museum expressed concern over the absence of any announced program for control of the disease here.

Lack of nurses and bed space for tuberculosis victims are two of the most acute problems facing residents of the District, it was said.

Pointing out that there are only 12 nurses allotted to tuberculosis nursing by the Public Health Nursing Bureau, Miss Gertrude Bowling, executive director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, deplored the extreme shortage of nurses in every tuberculosis hospital in Washington.

Pay Boosts May Help. "Gaps" in tuberculosis nursing service may begin to be filled, she said, by paying nurses a better salary.

Dr. Roy L. Sexton, chairman of the Public Health Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, said at least 1,500 hospital beds are needed for proper treatment of sufferers of the disease.

"We have only 1,167 and of those 300 are closed because of a shortage of help," he said.

Dr. Sterling Lloyd, chairman of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Medical-Chirurgical Society, struck at the lack of personnel to carry out an adequate rehabilitation program for patients who are about to be cured.

Cost Cited.

In a summary of the cost in sickness, death and money in the District, it was reported that at least 600 persons die from the disease each year, 4,000 persons have known cases and an estimated 6,000 others are victims. Total cost for treatment of the disease, which ranks fourth in mortality in the District, is $1,900,000 yearly.

In stressing more tuberculosis health education for parents, school personnel and students, Mrs. Arthur Watkins, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, pointed out that all adults, especially those who come in contact with children, should be X-rayed regularly.

Suggesting that a concerted effort be made to develop a program to ferret out every case of tuberculosis in the District, Dr. Sexton said 100,000 chest X-rays are made here annually, when there should be twice that many.
