Survey Puts Blame For Gallinger Deaths On Inadequate Nursing

for the Metropolitan Health Council of the Council of Social Agencies. Establishment of a new Bureau of Medical Social Service in the Health Department, to serve not only the hospitals, but all bureaus of the department which deal with individuals and family counseling, was proposed.

"The areas of public health nursing and medical social service are distinct and independent fields of professional competence," declared the report. "Clear recognition of this fact would contribute to the efficiency of other bureaus, would relieve the Bureau of Nursing of duties which interfere with the quality and quantity of its proper work and would place the District in the forefront of public health advance among the municipal health departments of this continent."

Appointment of two full-time assistants to the director of the Maternal and Child Health Bureau of the Health Department, with more clerical aides and clerks, was recommended.

Opposes Woman's Clinic.
Among one of the sharpest suggestions was one on the Woman's Clinic, operating since 1883 on Georgia avenue N.W.

On this subject the survey said: "Health departments should be empowered to license separate clinics as well as hospitals. With this in mind, in the interests of sound health practice, serious consideration should be given to discontinuing the services of Woman's Clinic." This was described as a voluntary clinic serving patients who could be better cared for in a physician's office or in a hospital or health department clinic.

"Without questioning the qualifications of the physicians," said the report, "the quality of service in the clinic must suffer from the absence of nursing assistance and adequate equipment and facilities for diagnosis and treatment. The funds raised by the board could be put to more efficient use by donations to some type of health work which is already well organized to give medical care to mothers and children."

The report recommended that the maternity service provided by the Montgomery General Hospital "should be radically reformed or discontinued."

"More hospital beds for maternity cases are needed, particularly for Negroes," the report said.

"The report said: 'Steps should be taken to provide adequate facilities to care for Negro unmarried mothers, which are at present grossly inadequate.'"

Mental Hygiene Scrutinized.
"Community programs for maternal and child health and nursery facilities, when under the auspices of private agencies, should be coordinated with those of other agencies, private and public."

Several proposals for improvement of facilities for mental hygiene were advanced.

The Metropolitan Health Council was urged to study mental clinic services of the entire area, try to strengthen those now in the District, and get other clinics established, not only here, but in either Alexandria or Arlington, and in Prince Georges County.

The council was urged to bring about establishment in a local hospital of facilities for "residential care of pre-psychotic post-encephalitic and other types of children in need of special group care."

Psychiatric and psychological consultants, the surveyors recommended, should be made available to homes for unmarried mothers, so as to "favor rather than retard, the emotional adjustment of the clients of such institutions."

Regarding crippled children, the report recommended the two State health departments and the District each employ a full-time director for the crippled children's service.

Would Remove Barriers
Criticism of residential requirements for care, the surveyors urged "that regulations which prohibit children in need of care receiving it be abolished. This refers, it was explained, to the strict residence requirements in the District and Virginia, and also, in Virginia, to the requirement for certification by a physician or referral by a welfare department."

The age limit for the Arlington County Clinic should be raised, it was proposed, from 16 to 21 years of age.

The District of Columbia was urged to get adequate funds to carry out the rehabilitation center planned by the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare. It was also urged that financial arrangements be made so that children in all of the metropolitan area may benefit.

More attention should be given to children with cerebral palsy, the report recommended, suggesting joint action by the two states and the District.

Local chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, together with the official programs, should plan for meeting epidemic and current needs, the report proposed.

Setting up a curative workshop for the District, to be used by both the time of one and a half nursing assistants and a part-time psychologist, was recommended as a field for new private agency or agencies.

Cites Health Center.
The Child Health Center at Children's Hospital, financed by the Child Welfare Society and the Community War Fund, was said to provide "child health and child guidance service."

"This center is well housed, with adequate cubicles, doctors' and nurses' offices and a playroom, with an administrator, a medical director, two nurses and a half nursing assistants and a part-time psychologist. Additional medical service is provided by paid physicians. There are daily sessions for white and Negro clients, although the bulk of the clientele is Negro."

"The work seems to be conducted on a high plane," said the report, "but though the center was originally designed primarily for demonstration purposes, its teaching possibilities have not been well developed."

Faulty Integration Seen.
"This center seems to be rendering a valuable community service. The program is, however, not well integrated with other community services and there is some question in regard to integration with Children's Hospital services, such as medical social service, training of physicians and nurses and medical students."

"This might easily be developed into a demonstration center, with emphasis on teaching and greater development of child guidance and mental hygiene. If this is done, the work of the center should be more closely integrated with the Children's Hospital mental hygiene program, with the clinics of the department of health and with the home service of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society."

The three men responsible for the survey are widely known as experts in their fields. They are Dr. D. E. A. Winslow of New Haven, Conn., professor emeritus, department of public health, Yale University; Dr. Ira V. Hiscock, chairman of the department of public health of Yale, who also is vice president of the National Health Council; and Dr. Claude W. Munger, administrator of St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, who is president of the American College of Hospital Administrators.

War, Navy Chiefs Go to Annapolis And West Point
The Secretaries of War and Navy, chief opponents in the fight over merger of the armed forces, will show off their respective academies to each other today and Saturday. Secretary of War Patterson today is touring the Naval Academy at Annapolis with Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, and on Saturday the two Secretaries and members of their staffs will fly to West Point to look over the Military Academy.

After a dress parade by the midshipmen, the Secretaries will discuss problems of the Naval Academy with the superintendent, Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch.

Cardinal Griffin Leaves For Chicago After Talk With Truman

Bernard Cardinal Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster, England, left for Chicago today to visit Samuel Cardinal Stritch, after a day in Washington that included a call at the White House and a chat with President Truman. The cardinal left National Airport at 7:55 a.m.

Cardinal Griffin gave a press conference yesterday at the Apostolic Delegation, 3339 Massachusetts avenue N.W. He said that one of his reasons in coming to Washington was to see the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the apostolic delegate, who was his professor of canon law in Rome in 1925 to 1927.

Asked about food, he said, "Europe wants all the food it can get from the countries which have it." Of the international political situation he said, "The one obstacle to peace is the difference between the East and the West," adding, "I've said that many times before."

Enjoying Trip.

He said he was enjoying his trip in spite of his whirlwind character. He came to this country, he said, primarily to receive the honorary degree conferred on him by Fordham University Saturday and was now making calls on the American cardinals and a few of the bishops. In Philadelphia, he said, "I visited 15 places in three hours and spoke in every one of them."

The cardinal was asked if he had Irish ancestry and he said not that he knew of.

"The tombstones of my great grandparents show they were born in the English midlands," he said. "President de Valera (of Eire) told me that Griffin is a name that can be Irish, Welsh or English. I believe I am all English."

"Now, now," said Archbishop Cicognani, who had entered the room, "don't make an Irishman of him. He's English."

Cleanup Drive Extended

Because of unfavorable weather conditions recently, the cleanup campaign of Mount Rainier has been extended from May 18 through May 25, Chairman Clarence B. Silke announced today. The drive is sponsored by the Town Council, civic groups, church organizations and other public agencies in the community.
