Croat President Lays Attacks on Priests to Ruling on Godfathers

By the Associated Press
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Aug. 29.—President Vladimir Bakarich of the Croatian Republic was quoted today by Tanjug, Yugoslav news agency, as saying that Sunday's mob attacks on Catholic priests in Venezia Giulia resulted from a ruling by certain priests that persons classed as "enemies of the church" would be barred from acting as godfathers at confirmation ceremonies.

Mr. Bakarich was quoted as saying that Mr. Jakob Ukmir, a Vatican prelate who was injured in the attacks after being sent to the area to administer confirmation to Catholic children when local priests experienced hostility, had been placed under arrest, and that "together with other participants in the incidents and their organizers" he would be turned over to the courts.

Mr. Bakarich was in a Fiume hospital with concussion and body wounds received at the hands of the same mob which killed Father Miro Bulesich.

Charges Provocation.
(Catholic authorities have said Father Bulesich was beheaded by a sickle-wielding mob in Lanišče, in the Yugoslav occupation zone, and Trieste newspapers said another priest, a Father Kristan, was found tortured to death.)

"The incident resulted from well-planned and well-prepared and organized provocation, which authorities in Trieste did not recognize in time," Mr. Bakarich was quoted as saying.

He said it stemmed from a meeting of the priests of the Society of St. Paul, which he said made the ruling concerning godfathers at confirmation ceremonies. These priests, he added, contended that members of the Yugoslav Army and members of the Youth Railway were not worthy to be godfathers of children being confirmed.

They succeeded, Mr. Bakarich continued, "in . . . lulling to sleep vigilant authorities who follow a policy of noninterference in church affairs."

He said the mobs were armed with sticks and rocks by elements of the Ustashi, a Yugoslav underground organization, when they went to the priests to protest the ruling. One violent incident, Mr. Bakarich said, was averted, but the second time the militia was unable to prevent violence and barely succeeded in saving Mr. Ukmir's life.

"It is certain that we do not want such incidents," the Croatian President concluded, "and we hope they will not be repeated and will most radically suppress any such provocative moves."

Belgrade newspapers yesterday published a dispatch from Fiume which declared that "the repeated, provocative stand of representatives of the higher Catholic clergy from Trieste assembled around Bishop Satini" was responsible for Sunday's mob violence.
