

Old-Timers in Korea Give Tips On How to Stay Alive at Front

By Don Whitehead

WITH THE 24th INFANTRY DIVISION IN KOREA, Aug. 17—Here are a few tips, soldier, on how to stay alive in this strange war in Korea.

They were learned the hard way by men like you who suddenly were called to war.

They learned a lot, these veterans. So read this carefully:

1. Get yourself as hard physically as you can. Work at it, soldier, until you are ready to drop. Get your legs in shape to climb mountains. That's where you will do most of your fighting—up there in the rugged mountains. And the tougher you are the better your chance to save yourself and your buddies.
2. Don't underestimate the enemy you are going to fight. The Red soldier won't have clothing or equipment or weapons quite as good as yours. He's thin and scrawny looking and he can stand under your outstretched arm. And he knows how to handle his weapons. He's a good fighter. And he can climb mountains all day long. He's been doing it since he was a kid, soldier. Also he'll have the advantage there. And it's a big advantage.

Ask the Veterans.

3. When you reach Korea pump all the information you can get out of the veterans. Ask the old-timers what they have learned. Soak up all the things they tell you. And if possible ask your commanding officers to call in combat veterans to give you lectures before you get into the combat line. It's your life, soldier, and in this war you must know as much as possible before facing the enemy.
4. Don't go out into the fighting area alone. Stay with small groups traveling on the roads or in the hills. A sniper is less likely to fire on you in a group than if you are alone—and a small group has a better chance of getting through the enemy than single soldiers.
5. Never forget this is a battle for the highest ridges—and it cannot be fought from jeeps on the road. The man who sits on the highest ground is looking down at the other man. So that's where you want to be—the high ground. It's tough to get up there—but always remember you are a sitting duck if the enemy is looking down on you.

6. When you drive the enemy out of a position—search for hidden weapons. The North Koreans have a sly trick of hiding their weapons in bushes and in crevices in the mountains before they run from our fire. You think you have driven them away, but then they'll slip back at night and pick up their weapons to open fire on you again next morning.
7. Keep your guards out at all times even in areas 5 and 10 miles behind the fighting line. They're playing for keeps in this one and you can't drop your guard at any time.
8. Don't let "refugees" come filtering through your lines and get behind you. Many Americans are dead today because they let refugees collect behind their positions without checking to see if there were guns, mortars and machineguns in the packs carried by the natives. But don't search the refugees alone. Do it in groups with your guns ready. The other day two soldiers became suspicious of a refugee column. And suddenly the "refugees" opened fire and killed the two Americans. Dirty? Sure it's dirty. But they are playing dirty in this war.

9. Don't come over here cockily expecting to kick the enemy in the teeth before Christmas. This is going to be a hard campaign that may well last into next spring. That means you could be fighting through snow and ice in the mountains in a country that has bitterly cold winter.
