

Picture of White House Pass Brings Decision to Change It

Publication of a picture of a White House pass has resulted in a decision to change the appearance of the passes, now in the hands of more than 1,200 newsmen and Government officials.

The decision was announced today by White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, who said reproduction of the card in the January 14 issue of the magazine United States News and World Report "has caused considerable concern to the White House and the Secret Service."

Use by Imposters. Secret Service officials fear, it was learned, that imposters could use the magazine's reproduction to prepare a fake White House pass.

Mr. Hagerty said he hoped the cards now in use could be changed in some way, thus avoiding issuance of new ones. White House passes are issued only after the Secret Service checks on the recipient. About 750 are held by newspaper reporters, about 110 by photographers and about 400 by Government officials.

The magazine printed a picture of the White House card along with cards issued by the White House Correspondents' Association, the State Department Correspondents' Association and the Senate and House press galleries under the heading: "Cards that open doors to Red newsmen."

Others to Change. Mr. Hagerty said the two correspondents' associations would be asked to change their cards. The Senate-House card pictured was outdated.

Mr. Hagerty said that from now on White House cards are not to be reproduced. He added that he was sure there was "nothing malicious or deliberate" in the reproduction by the magazine. He was convinced, he said, "the editors of the magazine did not realize the possible effects that the printing of these cards could have."

Makins Praises Policy Of U. S. on Formosa

By the Associated Press
ORLANDO, Fla., Jan. 26.—President Eisenhower's statement of American policy in the Formosa straits drew praise yesterday from the British Ambassador to the United States.

Sir Roger Makins, speaking informally to Rollins College students, said his government and the United States have been "in very close consultation" on the China situation for some time.

The Ambassador said he hopes the Chinese Communists will be convinced by the President's message "as they should be of the Pacific attitude and entirely unprovocative attitude you have taken up and also convinced the United States is determined to protect her interests in the Pacific."

The consequent lowering of tension might then lead to a situation where the Communists may abandon their attempts to take Formosa and the islands under control of Chiang and the Chinese Nationalists in turn may abandon their attempts to get back on the mainland," Sir Roger said.

the best doctor he can find. If he flies, he wants the best pilot and the best equipment available. A litigant does not want second best justice. He wants the best too, and the best must be had if justice is to be administered properly. It is a shocking thing to think that the bare essentials for the ordinary and effective administration of justice have not been furnished in adequate amount to the judiciary by the Congress.

"The appearance of the Chief Justice of the United States before a joint session of Congress should be welcomed by its members and it would be in keeping with the dignity and the importance of the judicial branch of the Government. The Chief Justice is entitled to speak and the Congress, as well as the country, is duty bound to hear and heed his report."

Legion Auxiliary Chiefs Hail Stand on Formosa

Strong support of President Eisenhower and Congress for their stand on the defense of Formosa was given today by the National Executive Committee of the American Legion Auxiliary, meeting at the Hotel Statler.

Military

"the first requirement will not be manpower in the Army."

Mr. Wilson pointed out that the Chinese Nationalists have had a big army sitting on Formosa for several years.

Throughout his prepared statement and in answer to questions by committee members, Mr. Wilson emphasized that the proposed military program adopted by the administration will bring "stability" in the armed forces that can be maintained for years to come.

Admiral Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, appeared with Mr. Wilson. The admiral was scheduled to testify during the afternoon on the proposed 1956 defense plans and budget.

Before the hearing, Mr. Vinson told newsmen the briefing by Mr. Wilson and Admiral Radford had been scheduled some time ago and was not specifically prompted by the Formosa problem.

Mr. Wilson said in his statement he did not expect Russia "to take action during the next few years that would deliberately precipitate another world conflict." But Communist aims are unchanged, he said, and a "conflict might arise through miscalculation on their part."

"I cannot at this time," he added, "foresee any important reduction in the military establishment nor in the total annual military expenditures of the Department of Defense below the present levels, nor do I see any need for any important increases short of war."

Mr. Wilson said continental defense and "effective retaliatory power" have been given "high priority."

Next year's program, he said, "lays particular stress on the utilization of nuclear energy in military operations . . . and (in) the defense of operational guided missiles to meet the urgent requirements of our air defense and retaliatory forces."

The continental defense program, Mr. Wilson said, is being "pushed with all practical speed" and he predicted early development of improved radar, piloted and pilotless planes of all ranges and better anti-submarine devices.

Outlining administration military manpower plans—which have met with some criticism in Congress—Mr. Wilson said the Army's current 19-division force would be cut to 18. This would consist of 13 mobile divisions, two divisions with a fixed mission and three training divisions. There also would be 11 Army regimental combat teams, a reduction of one, and 138 anti-aircraft battalions, an increase of 19.

The Air Force, he said, is aiming for 131 wings, more than 23,000 planes and 975,000 men by mid-1956, "four more combat wings than the Air Force planned one year ago."

The Navy, he said, would maintain 1,600 ships, including 405 warcraft, and with the Marines and air reserves would have about 10,000 aircraft. Navy strength would drop from 887,000 to 664,000 men and the Marines from 234,000 to about 193,000 men, Mr. Wilson said.

The committee, Mr. Vinson said, will begin hearings Monday on Mr. Eisenhower's request to extend the general draft four more years and to continue the doctors' draft for two years. Both laws are due to expire next June 30.
