the House Legislative Oversight Subcommittee, expressed his views after Frank Stanton, the president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, told the committee that legislation was not "a cure-all" and that television must accept responsibility for all its programs. Mr. Harris said the disclosures of quiz show rigging re-vealed "a shocking situation."

"The morality of the entire television industry has been challenged," he declared.

He also said other television practices "deserve scrutiny and we will give them that scrutiny." He then recessed the hearings until December 9.

Appearing as the closing witness, Dr. Stanton said it might be desirable for Congress to make it a crime to use deceitful practices in TV games, contests or advertising, and to clarify the Federal Trade Commission's authority to halt deceitful practices.

CBS, he testified, is ready help develop such laws the subcommittee decides they are needed. But he emphasized that the network was going ahead on its own with general rules to, assure "that programs will be exactly what they appear to be."

NEW YORK (AP) .-- A woman attorney who was defeated on the Twenty-One television quiz 'show filed a $1.2 million suit today against the National Broadcasting Co. on the ground she had been "fraudulently eliminated."

Ethel A. Davidson charged in a State Supreme Court action that her ability would have enabled her "to win at least $100.000."

She was defeated October 29, 1956, by Herbert Stempel, the first big money winner on the program and the originator of public charges that the show was rigged. Miss Davidson received a $100 consolation prize.
