

45,000 Visit Home Show So Far

Attendance so far at the Washington Home and Outdoor Living Show has reached almost 45,000 persons, and another 20,000 visitors are expected today and tomorrow.

That was the announcement today by James W. Pearson, show director and executive vice president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, which sponsors the exposition at the District National Guard Armory, Nineteenth and East Capitol streets.

The show will remain open until 11 o'clock tonight and until 8 p.m. Sunday. Doors open at 2 p.m. daily.

On the program today is the award of a houseboat having a retail value of $5,200, Mr. Pearson said. Scheduled for tomorrow at 5 p.m. is a public wedding.

"Comments I have heard appear to be agreed that this is the most colorful and best-designed of the 14 annual shows that we have held," Mr. Pearson said.

Wall cabinets can supply useful storage space.

Concealed Storage Areas

Today's designers are obliged to be conscious of the need for space, and must try to put every bit to work.

Walls make the best starting point for space expansion. In many modern homes, walls are storage cabinets, music boxes, sometimes even refreshment bars. Yet many of these dual-purpose walls look very much like ordinary walls.

Concealing wall storage compartments is easy when working with paneled walls for the cabinet fronts or doors can be tailored so that they blend with the rest of the paneling. Doors also can be installed with magnetic latches which need no exterior hardware and open by finger pressure.

The dining room is a favorite spot to conceal wall storage units. China closets can be full-wall affairs, with shelving, drawer and tray space which reaches floor-to-ceiling and doors that, when closed, fade into the paneling.

Tiny spaces, such as a two-foot-wide wall area between a door and corner, can be put to work in the same way. An area like this might be outfitted with a tier of built-in cabinets. Doors either can be designed so that they are not noticeable, or can be fitted with decorative hardware to emphasize their presence.

Favorite woods to use for concealed cabinetry and wall paneling are softwoods which not only are easily tailored, but tough and beautiful, as well.
