

TWO AMERICAN ARCHBISHOPS FOR ROME TO RECEIVE CARDINAL'S INSIGNIA

Archbishop Falconio.

Archbishop Farley.

This is a reproduction of a photograph taken at New York on board the steamer on which Cardinals-designate Falconio and Farley sailed for Rome to receive the insignia of their high office.

To Sue for Fortune of Sister He Hadn't Seen for 44 Years

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—James H. Piat of this city has announced that he will enter suit for part of the estate of Anna Wilson, rich demimonde, who died recently in Omaha, and whom Piat now claims was his sister. The woman left the majority of her fortune of $500,000 to charity.

Piat says the last he heard of his sister was in 1867, when she was employed as a maid in Memphis, Tenn. Then the family lost track of her. She had eloped previous to this, but the marriage had ended unhappily, and it was thought she had run away with another man.

Rumor from Memphis came to the family that the girl was dead. Recently Piat saw a picture of the woman of the underworld in an Omaha paper. Piat claims that the picture, which had been taken several years ago, was that of his sister.

He also says that the time of the arrival of "Anna Wilson" in Omaha and the departure of Margaret Piat from Memphis coincide.