

tickled in my life as I was when I saw the old woman at the lime kiln."

As a result of the message sent out by the passengers Gov. Hay of Washington was planning a rescue expedition to get the lad off when he arrived here safe on the Rosalie.

"I thought I would hide away until the ship started, and then work my way, when they found me," said the boy. "I didn't have any money to pay passage and I was willing to work my way home, but the captain wouldn't even let me do that."

THIS WEEK'S JOKES HOT FROM BROADWAY

First Comedian — "George Washington was the first American to make the flag FAMOUS."

Second Comedian—"Yes, but George Cohan was the first to make it PAY."—Cook & Lorenz.

Floor-walker (to cash girl)—"Why don't you get married, Mamie?"

Cash-girl—"Say, you! the privilege of handing my envelope over to some Johnny every Saturday doesn't appeal to yours truly—nix!"—"Maggie Pepper."

Jones (to star boarder)—"What was that crash I heard in your room early this morning?"

Star Boarder—"That crash? Oh, that was somebody delivering a load of beer."

Jones—"A load of beer in my house?"

Star Boarder—"Yes—I was the load."—Cook & Lorenz.

Mrs. Nagg—"I can't help it. It's your own fault, that I'm always scolding. Why, ever since we've been married we've been quarreling. Do you remember our honeymoon? Do you remember I sat a whole hour and didn't speak to you?"

Husband—"Do I remember? You bet your life, I do. I'll never forget it. That hour was the happiest of my life."—Shroede & Chapelle.

Mr. Peevish—If some women only knew what they look like and sound like, they wouldn't dress so freaky, and wouldn't put on such airs."

Mrs. Peevish (her chance at last)—Yes, and if some men were introduced to THEMSELVES, when in company, they would be ashamed of the acquaintance.—Gus Williams.

Pessimist—Oh, he's no good. His folks are no good, and his ancestors were thieves, and so is he one, too—

Optimist (interrupting him)—Look here, my man, you shouldn't be knocking a man because he's in bad, or he's up against it. Why, even a tombstone says good things about a man when he's down.—Harry Beresford and Company.
