Tinker Has Made Good As Boss of Cincinnati Team.

The report from Cincinnati that Joe Tinker is dissatisfied and has tendered Garry Hermann his resignation as manager of the Reds may or may not be true, but it is a cinch that J. Fayersham will not be fired.

He has more than made good, and with a bunch of inferior material. Tinker is said to object to the way Hermann has ordered men disposed of. Hermann is reported to have declared he entirely approved of the showing Tinker has made and would not let him go under any conditions.

The entire yarn sounds like a wild-eyed dream.

When Tinker went to Cincinnati it was believed he had a team that would finish in the race. But his pitching staff proved to be such in name only, the outfield fell down in batting, and the infielders were not reliable. Joe made some trades and purchases, uncovered a couple of effective pitchers and has at last, secured a regular ball team. He has instilled fight into the Reds, something they lacked in the past. Even with a team that was getting licked regularly, Tinker has proved a drawing card throughout the season. Fans realized when the Reds came to town that they might be licked, but not until after a game struggle. With the men he has now, and what he will secure by purchase and draft at the season's close, Tinker should be well fortified next year and has a swell chance to finish in the first division.

A little bet at evens that he will be directing Herrmann's hired hands next spring.

Now that a Chinaman has licked an Irishman in a prizefight, we expect to hear that John McGraw has signed a few yellow men for his more or less ball team.

If Reb Russell ever expects to have anything handed to him but a swift kick in the pants he had better join the staff of the city spoke inspector. According to the civil service commission, which secured waivers on eight of these gents a couple of days ago, they were given little things like hams, shoes, cigars and railroad passes by different corporations.

If Reb was ever given anything useful he would probably collapse from shock.

There have been few better pitched games in the American League this year than the Texas southpaw turned loose against the Yanks to celebrate the return of the White Sox to the South Side. Reb's portion was defeat, administered because his mates were powerless with the bat before Russell Ford. Six hits were allotted to the Yanks, and six of them bit on the Rebel's hook and fast one. A couple of the bingles came bunched in one inning, however, along with
