TO LEAVE PROBE INTO KILLING OF BENTON TO U. S.

London, Feb. 21.—The British government, for the present at least, will leave investigation of the execution of William S. Benton, a British owner in Mexico, wholly in the hands of the United States, requesting this government to thoroughly investigate the circumstances.

The execution of Benton is admitted by Villa, who authorized U. S. Consul T. D. Edwards, at Juarez, to notify the widow of the mine owner.

Villa's defense, if the U. S. or England demands an explanation, will probably be that Benton was shot because he entered Villa's office and threatened him with a revolver, when he came to protest to the rebel chief-tain against the destruction of his property by the constitutionalists.

The mine owner was last seen alive in Juarez on Tuesday morning. He was headed for Villa's headquarters, where he said he meant to tell the rebel leader what he thought of him for allowing the rebels to damage his ranch, "Los Remedios," in Chihuahua.

The execution of Benton is believed to have occurred Tuesday night at Juarez, after a military court trial, of which Frederico Gonzales Garza was the presiding officer. The formal charge was that Benton was implicated in a plot to take Villa's life.

EXCITEMENT RUNS HIGH OVER EXECUTION OF ENGLISHMAN

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 21.—Great excitement prevailed here when extra editions of newspapers told of the execution of William S. Benton, an English subject, by a squad of Gen. Villa's soldiers. Indignation against Villa reached fever heat and the rebel commander left Juarez suddenly.
