COP IS HERO WHEN WATER RUSHES IN ON CARS IN TUNNEL

"Big Pete" Hassett, 6 feet 6, member of the East Chicago avenue station's "beauty squad," was the police department's real hero today—but he had to stay in bed while his wife dried his trousers on the clothesline.

"Big Pete's" chance came at midnight. The bursting of a 36-inch water main sent a flood of water into the LaSalle street car tunnel just as a car reached the bottom.

"Big Pete" leaped into the tunnel with water above his knees and steadily rising and the lights blinked out by the flood. He groped his way to the car, gathered into his arms two women, shrieking hysterically, their skirts hoisted above their knees, and carried them to safety. Male passengers waded to the mouth of the tunnel through water up to their armpits. Eight feet of water flooded the bore today.

The main broke near a spot where a small leak was being repaired. Property loss was heavy. A building at 126-130 W. Austin avenue was undermined. Other buildings suffered. The safety of the tunnel is not affected, according to engineers.

MILITANTS SUFFRAGETS ARE ORDERED OUT OF THE POLLS

Miss Dorothy Pethick, English militant aide to Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, with a record of two jail terms for acts of violence, was ordered out of a First Ward polling place yesterday afternoon when she entered to watch Chicago women use the ballot for the first time.

"We don't allow loafers here; you'll have to get out," a red-faced policeman told Miss Pethick and her companion, Miss Margaret Hodge, an Australian suffraget. They obeyed the order.

Miss Pethick and Miss Hodge arrived here yesterday on a tour of America.
