

up safe and sound in a life-saving boat.

When asked how it felt to nearly drown she answered: "It was a most pleasant sensation. I forgot everything for a few seconds and seemed to be in a dream. I wasn't a bit afraid until I was safe in the life boat and then of course I realized what danger I had been in."

Miss Hennessy is small and very graceful. She is very quaint in appearance and looks at one with an expression that shows eagerness and much interest. Before she became a movie actress she was a society dancer of the "Mrs. Vernon Castle" type. Dancing and swimming are her favorite pastimes.

WHY IS IT?

Well, before we say other hard things about him let's see what Mr. Owl feeds on, that may throw some light on his seemingly bad habits. You won't have to look far to find that the owl's principal diet is mice.

So there you have the whole story—if the foolish little mice would stay a-bed nights, the owl would probably settle down to be a respectable family man, but as it is, if he is to live at all he must gad about a good deal at night.

Because he has to "see in the dark" the owl has bigger eyes than most birds and they are so constructed that they can catch every ray of light the moon sheds on him. Where day birds can't see a thing, Mr. Owl can spy out the tiniest mouse or insect.

So, before we blame the owl for his night-prowling let us remember the ways of the mice—if they'd permit themselves to be caught in daylight we'd never hear as much as a too-who or too-wit at night.

The Borneo islands boast of a telegraph line constructed of mahogany and ebony poles. This is no doubt the most valuable telegraph line in existence.

WEALTHY AMERICAN "BREAKS IN" TO LONDON SOCIETY

Mrs. J. B.
Eustis

London, England.—Mrs. James B. Eustis, wife of the former United States ambassador to France, has walked right through the barriers the American colony placed between her and smart London drawing-rooms.

Notwithstanding her wealth and beauty, Mrs. Eustis was "cold shouldered" by the London American colony when she sought social recognition last spring, but recently a few of the most exclusive Londoners gave a grand ball for Mrs. Eustis and now she's the most popular American woman in London.

A motion picture machine that may be packed away in a traveling man's kit has been invented, and it will here after be possible for the salesman to exhibit his wares anywhere.
