"NEW PATTI" NEVER TOOK A
LESSON IN SINGING

1901
VICTOR OSONO
GALLI, CURCI

Galli Curci is the newest grand opera idol and called the "new Patti," but never took a singing lesson. Her study in music was devoted to the piano. The new star is 26. She was unknown in the United States six months ago. She is the wife of Marquis Galli, portrait painter. She has just signed for five grand opera seasons.

RADIATORS

Do your radiators radiate?

Or do they spend their days and nights singing, whistling, carousing and whooping it up around room corners? And do they wake up in the morning hiccoughing and belching and looking dissipated?

Ours do. And we swear by every icicle on our mustache that before we rent again we'll ask the landlord how his radiators spend their evenings.

"Will this radiator care," we'll ask, "whether we freeze to death?" And if the landlord answers evasively we'll go elsewhere.

Big, husky, infelligent-looking radiators like ours that stand around and hiccough and sing soprano at 7 o'clock in the morning have certainly gone to the devil and there's no hope for them.

We don't think much of radiators anyhow. Base-burners and round oak stoves may have had their faults, but they knew their business.
