If United States Would Promise To Oversee Fair Election, Would Lay Down Arms.

SAYS LIEUT. COL. ALVAREZ

Declares Trath Is Not Getting Out of Mexico-Thousands of Men In Arms.

'El Paso, Texas, Dec. 8.-Jose Sanchez Alvarez, former prominent mine and land owner at Parral, Mexico, now a licutenant colonel in the insurrectionary army in Mexico, here last night on secret business, talked readily of the trouble in his country and did not mind having his name used, so confident was he of insurgent success.

"Of course, we don't know whether we will win," he said. "But many of we will will, he said. But himly of us prefer to die rather than to lose. You are not getting the truth out of Mexico, nor have you any idea of what is going on. We have between 7,000 and 8,000 men in arms, all through Chihuahua. They are the same kind of men of which the rural police are made, good fighting men. Our sharpshooter service is as good Our sharpshooter service is as good as "Politically, we want the Americans to know that we believe them our friends and the action of all our troops will bear out that statement. If the United States would promise to oversee a fair election as it did in Cuba, we would throw down our arms at once, That is all we want. We could take the City of Chihuahua if we wanted it, but we could not hold the love of the could be could be

we wanted it, but we could not hold it long at present.

"Also we could tie up the National rallways of Mexico, but we don't want to do that either. While it is called the National Railways, it is owned by Americans, and we don't want any Americans helping the Mexican government. As long as we keep our hands off American property, we will be left to fight our own battles, we hope.

"We are sorry that Alberto Terrazas has been appointed governor of Chihuahua, Sanchez was a 'buffer' between two forces, Terrazas is not.

"There will be fighting there soon. Our men are mostly still on their ranches, but all are armed. We are baving little trouble procuring arms from the states. It is very easy." The colonel of insurgents smiled a

Democrats Figuring on What to Do When Required Seven Days Have Elapsed.

Washington, Dec. 8 .- The Ballinger-Pinchot reports will not be acted upon by the bouse committee on agriculture, to which they have been referred, until after the Christmas holidays, at least, and perhaps not at all, according to present indications.

In fact the members of this committee cannot see why the reports were referred to them except for the conservation questions involved. They protest that the reports, having been made by a special joint commission of Congress, should have been left on the speaker's table instead of being referred to any standing committee.

Just now the committee on agriculture, which is headed by Representative Scott of Kansas, one of the members who was not re-elected to the next Congress is considering the agricultural appropriation bill and while the committee has not yet had an opportunity to consider the Ballinger-Pinchot con-to consider the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy the appropriation measure will be made a temporary vehicle for holding up such consideration.

Meantime! the Democrats of the house, particularly the minority members of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, along with Mr. Madlson of Kansas, the insurgent Republican member, are figuring on what action to take after the required seven days clause when a rule from the company selanse when a rule from the comdays elapse when a rule from the committee on rules might be in order. The Democrats will seek recourse to a rule and, failing early action, plan to bring up the question in speech on the floor of the house.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF WATER POWER SITES

Washington, Dec. 8 .- A plan is being considered by the National Conservation association, of which Gifford Pinadvocates of federal regulation of water power sites and those who stand for state control, according to announcement made today by the executive committee of the association.

The object of the plan, which was defeated by Philip P. Wells, formerly law officer of the forest service, is to afford "a waterpower platform on which both sides of the water power controunite to protect public in terests and at the same time encourage the development of many millions of horsepower now going to waste in the mountain streams of the far west and the great rivers of the central and eastern parts of the country." The proposed plan has been laid before a number of engineers of wide experience in water power development as well as various officers and man-agers of hydro-electric power comagers of hydro-electric power com-panies and is said to have met with panies and is said to have met with their aproval.

The basis of the plan is developed "without delay waste or the sacrifice of other and higher uses of flowing waters."

For this, the plan declares, private capital must be aided by the states or federal government through corporate franchises, condemnation of private property and licenses to use public lands and obstruct public waters. The power companies are to have certainty of tenure for a reasonable length of time and a chance for "generous profits on their actual investment" for the its on their actual investment" for the its on their actual investment" for the public, the plan promises "good service, fair prices, full publicity as to cost, honest capitalization and fair rentals for public property used by the companies."

The government, it is conceded in the plan, has no jurisdiction unless its land is to be occupied, or navigable streams affected.

Bell was operating one of two traction engines engaged in pulling a house belonging to Mrs. P. Nelson, a widow, from a location in the creek bottom to a higher elevation.
