ARMISTICE.

Adjourned to Monday

After Two Ballots.

The Convention Seems Approaching a Deadlock.

Harrison Gains More than One

Hundred Votes.

But He is Marked for Destruction by a Powerful "Combination" McKinley

Defines His Position—Ingersoll's

Speech Damaged Gresham.

THE VOTE.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The convention met this morning with the usual rumors of combinations flying through the air as thick as blackbirds. Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll does not appear in the hall, but his name is on many lips and his interrupted speech of last night appears to have irreparably damaged Gresham's boom, although that candidate's friends refuse to admit this, and still claim that the convention must come to him eventually;

but as the time for meeting arrives the Gresham movement is almost lost sight of in the conflict of opinion as to the great fight pending at once between Harrison and Allison.

Senator Cameron has prevailed upon

Quay, who leads the Pennsylvania forces, to go into the Allison combination. If Quay cannot succeed with the Allison movement he may run in with the Harrison movement, but is more likely to join the combination of the field against the Indiana candidate. Friends of Harrison are claiming that the Blaine people are coming to their man, that he will succeed after three ballots.

In the face of all this many eyes are turned towards McKinley, of Ohio, as an exceedingly promising dark horse. Most of the leaders are still (9:40 a. m.) absent, indicating that combinations are not all fixed yet. As the minutes pass the belief grows stronger that no result will be possible at the morning's session, and that after several ballots the convention will take a recess. If this is done, it is considered probable that the "no nomination can be made before Monday.

OPENING OF THE SESSION.

The convention was called to order at 10:15, but no one appeared until minutes later that the proceedings after a long wrangle to Quay's desire.

They held to Sherman for two ballots.

A great majority of the delegates also opposed to vote for adjournment after the second ballot.

McKINLEY FAITHFUL TO SHERMAN.

Just after the vote of Connecticut was announced, McKinley arose and said: "I am here as one of the chosen representatives of my state. I am here by a resolution of the Republican convention, passed without any dissenting voice, commanding me to cast my vote for John Sherman, and to use every worthy endeavor for his nomination. I cannot consent to cause my heart and judgment were in accord with the letter and spirit and purpose of that resolution. It has pleased certain delegates to cast their votes for me. I am not insensible to the honor they would do me, but in the presence of the duty resting on me

I cannot remain silent with honor. I cannot, consistently with the credit of the state whose credentials I bear and which has trusted me; I cannot with honorable fidelity to John Sherman, who has trusted me in his cause and with his confidence, consent to consist with my own views on my personal integrity, consent or seem to consent to permit my name to be used as a candidate before this convention.

I would not respect myself if I could find it in my heart to say or permit to be said that I do not desire to be for any one to suspect that I wavered in my loyalty to Ohio or my devotion to the chief of her choice and chief of her heart. I do desire to be that no delegate who would not cast a rejection on me shall cast a ballot for me."

McKinley spoke earnestly and with emphasis. He was evidently sincere, and the convention at the conclusion of his little speech generally applauded. McKinley's statement was called out by the fact that when Connecticut was reached one vote was cast for him.

The ballot then passed without further incident until Illinois was reached, when a break of three votes from Connecticut to Harrison created sensation and was received with a mingled demonstration of hisses and applause.

WHEN NEW YORK

was reached the galleries hissed after
