OUR SUCCESSORS.

A pair of very chubby legs,
Incased in scarlet hose;
A pair of little snubby noses,
With rather doubtful toes,
A little hit, a little coat,
Cut as a mother ca—
And lo! before us strides in state
The future's "coming man."
A pair of laughing, deep blue eyes,
A wealth of ringlets brown,
With air coquetish as a queen,
The bells of all the town;
A dimpled chin and blushing cheek,
Lips red and teeth of pearl,
And lo! before us shy and meek,
We've the future's "coming girl."

ALONE WITH THE DYING.

It would be difficult to find in the whole range of fiction a more affecting incident than is contained in the following extract from a letter, written by a British seaman to his wife. It was his first service as a soldier, when he was sent on shore with a boat's crew of marines to silence a fort and take some guns:
"We dispersed at a few hundred yards distance from the beach to keep the coast clear while the boat's crew made prizes of the guns. The enemy had advantage of the wood, and also knowing the country well, and a troop of them showed in advance. We were ordered to fire. I took steady aim at my man at about sixty yards. He fell like a stone. At the same time a broadside from the — went in among the trees and the enemy disappeared, we could scarcely tell how. I felt as though I must go up to him and see whether he was dead or alive. He lay quite still and I was more afraid of him than when he stood facing me a few minutes before. It is a strange feeling to come over you all at once that you have killed a man. He had unbuttoned his jacket and was pressing his hand over the front of his chest, where the wound was. He breathed hard and the blood poured from the wound and also from his mouth every few seconds. His face was as white as death, and his eyes looked so big and bright as he stared and stared at me. I shall never forget it. He was a fine young fellow, not more than twenty-five. I went down on my knees beside him, and my breast was as full as though my own heart would burst. He had a real English face and did not look like an enemy. What I felt I never can tell; but if my life could have saved his, I believe I should have given it. I laid his head on my knee, and he grasped hold of my hand and tried to speak, but his voice was gone. I could not tell a word he said, and every time he tried to speak the blood poured out, and I know it would soon be over. I am not ashamed to say that I was worse than he, for he never shed a tear, and I couldn't help it. His eyes were closed when a gun was fired from the — to our rear, and that aroused him. He pointed to the beach where the boat was just sinking, and then our marines were waiting for him. He looked at me, and then he pointed to the wood where the enemy was concealed. Poor fellow! he told how long he lay there, and how he felt, and how he would have given his life for me. He died with a smile on his face, and I shall never forget it. I laid his head on my knee, and he grasped hold of my hand and tried to speak, but his voice was gone. I could not tell a word he said, and every time he tried to speak the blood poured out, and I know it would soon be over. I laid his head on my knee, and he grasped hold of my hand and tried to speak, but his voice was gone. I could not tell a word he said, and every time he tried to speak the blood poured out, and I know it would soon be over. I am not ashamed to say that I was worse than he, for he never shed a tear, and I couldn't help it. His eyes were closed when a gun was fired from the — to our rear, and that aroused him. He pointed to the beach where the boat was just sinking, and then our marines were waiting for him. He looked at me, and then he pointed to the wood where the enemy was concealed. Poor fellow! he told how long he lay there, and how he felt, and how he would have given his life for me. He died with a smile on his face, and I shall never forget it.
