DRIFTWOOD BLAZE WINS Takes Blue Over Sceptre, Bohemian Actress and Myopia in Saddle Horse Class.

Seven calm eye mares stood in the dark ring at the Horse Show in Madison Square Garden yesterday and garded the great amphitheatre of human faces banded up all about them with tranquil contempt. They could afford to look down on the American men and women and all the other horses, for they were the only true aristocrats in sight. Every one of the seven could boast of the purest blood in Arabian lineage, and family archives going back to a thousand years before the first thoroughbred racehorse was foaled in Britain.

HIGH LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN ALL SPHERES OF SPORT

By DANIEL. Copyright, 1920, by The New York Herald.

WITH THE New York Boxing Commission's hitting the ban on heavyweights and the announcement that Jack Dempsey and Bill Brennan are to meet in Madison Square Garden on December 14, the festive atmosphere in this city has become decidedly more invigorating.

We are not particularly keen for a Dempsey-Brennan bout as a preliminary to the bout between Dempsey and Brennan will mark the first appearance of a heavyweight champion in actual combat in this city since March 25, 1916, when Jess Willard met Frank Moran in their ten round scrap in the Garden.

Previous to the Jeffries-Corbett battle the biggest heavyweight tussle in this neck of the woods was fought at Coney Island, on the night of November 3, 1899, when Jeffries defended the title against Tom Sharkey. George Siler, the referee, was called on to decide, for at the end of twenty-five rounds the combatants still were on their feet.

Pratt Institute's basketball team of Brooklyn yesterday defeated the Cooper Union five to two. The Brooklyn boys led the upper hand throughout the contest and led by 25 to 15 at the completion of the first half.

War Cry First in A Blanket Finish. Sticks Nose Home Ahead of Clean Gene in Feature Event at Bowditch.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19.—An excellent display of the Yale bowl, issued to-day, shows seats for 75,000 persons. The sixty-seven rows of seats, if placed in a single line, would extend 1,383 persons. The gridiron is 27 feet below the outside ground level and the upper seats 27 feet above.

The James W. McCalland confederacy applied its usual policy of winning in Mills. Applied, with War Cry, the extreme odds in the speculation, a nose in front of Clean Gene, while Wood Violet led Pastoral Swain by about the same distance.

The same order held until the final turn, where Clean Gene moved up stoutly on the outside to take a momentary lead, which was voluntarily relinquished by the driver of the final eighth.

War Cry responded to urging and drew up on the outside of Clean Gene, and the pair made an exciting struggle for the remainder of the race, with War Cry gaining the verdict. The ability of Miller to outflank Romanoff enabled War Cry to win. Wood Violet, after having been a trailer, took a free run in the stretch and got up in the last stride to take third over Pastoral Swain.

There was a noisy demonstration after the judges awarded the first prize to Romanoff. The crowd, who had gathered behind the line it appeared that Romanoff got up in the final stride, but the majority cheered and made vain demands that Romanoff be declared the winner.

The New York delegation cheered heartily when Head Over Heels took the first prize. The crowd, who had gathered behind the line it appeared that Romanoff got up in the final stride, but the majority cheered and made vain demands that Romanoff be declared the winner.
