not kept pace with the increase in learned yesterday. Instead of Mayor Hylan providing a "seat for every pupil" some now have to sit two in a seat. The double session is bad enough, principals declare, for that means that each school seat is used during the morning session by one pupil and during the afternoon session by another pupil. This term, which is just ending its second week, has introduced the two in a seat method of economy.

The Stuyvesant High School for boys, which is the only school with a definite scientific curriculum, has for the last five years been gradually increasing its number of double session pupils and the club bashs after hours, he explained. Two thousand of the boys attending the Stuyvesant High School live beyond the Harlem River. Those from so far uptown and who are in the afternoon session are late getting home. There are 220 teachers on the staff. No teacher is required to teach more than one session. The economy lies in the double use of the school building and the equipment, but it means harder work for the principal, whose hours are practically doubled, as is the number of pupils in his charge.

The Julia Richman High School for girls in Thirteenth street, near Sixth avenue, has been compelled by lack of space to organize double session classes in the main building. This is the first year for double time there, as herefore the overflow was accommodated in a new asnex. But there are no more annexes available just now, Dr. Michael H. Lucey, the principal, said. He has charge of six annexes, three on the upper East Side, as well as of the main school. The registration in the school this term is 3,609, which is 963 more

Don Carlos Buell, counsel for Savich, argued a State court has no power to prosecute him, as at the time of the alleged extortion and his indictment he was a foreign government official in actual service.
