The Daily Press

C. E. THACKER, Editor and Manager.

PUBLISHED EVERY MORNING EXCEPT MONDAY BY THE Daily Press Company

United, POSTOFFICE BUILDING.

The Daily Press may be obtained every morning at the following places: Chesapeake, Ohio Restaurant, Charles Robinson, No. 7 Ivy Avenue.

Parties other than those having ledger accounts with the paper, civic societies and military organizations, are required to pay for transient advertisements in advance. An increase of 33 1/3 per cent. will be charged for transient advertisements not paid for in advance and no transient advertisement will be booked for less space than one inch. To illustrate, one-half inch is 50 cents, one inch 75 cents for one time when paid in advance, but they will be billed if charged. Advertisers will save money by remembering this notice, which applies in all cases, irrespective of financial responsibility.

Advertising rates furnished on application. Contractors are not allowed to exceed their space or advertise other than their legitimate business, except by paying especially for the same. Advertisements discontinued before the expiration of contract will be charged for at transient rates for the time inserted.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1918

After Spain's experience with the one which blew up the Maine and sunk all the good ships of the Spanish navy, it seems that the Spanish government ought to get rid of all its high explosives.

Mr. Cleveland's unexplained silence at this important juncture in the history of the United States augurs ill for the nation. It is to be hoped that Princeton's most distinguished citizen has not come to the conclusion that the "blamed old country" is not worth saving any more.

It was very considerate in Mr. Quay and "honored" Wm. Johnmacker to refrain from displaying their large and interesting exhibit of hostility while Philadelphia's peace jubilee was being pulled off.

THE SMALL POX SCARE.
According to reports from Norfolk, it seems that while the epidemic of smallpox in that city is still well in hand, there are many features in connection with the matter that are of a discouraging nature and which should place the health authorities of this city upon their guard. It is to be hoped that it will be unnecessary to quarantine against the city across the Roads. That would entail untold annoyance and much loss upon the social and commercial interests that bind the two cities so closely together.

If the necessity becomes apparent, however, there should be no hesitating. There would be no loss of money and loss involved in quarantining against Norfolk than in having all the other cities of the country quarantine against Newport News.

There is no necessity for hysterical haste in reference to the matter, but every wise precaution necessary to protect the health of Newport News should be adopted. Unless the Board of Health already has sufficient power to regulate all cases that would naturally come under their jurisdiction in the event of an epidemic they should be given full authority to handle all matters affecting the public health. "Too many cooks would spoil the broth" in a case of that kind just as surely as in any other.

A prominent Frenchman who was in New York about two months ago offered a newspaper reporter on one of the metropolitan dailies a trip to Europe or almost any other old thing he felt like asking for in the event that Drayfus should be granted a reprieve inside of three months. This French visitor felt sure that Count Esterhazy was a perfect gentleman and that the prisoner of Devil's Island would remain in confinement to serve out his sentence of imprisonment for life. Now, if this talkative Gaul is a man of his word, he will find a rather annoying premise in his way when he returns to Gotham after his peregrinations through the wild and uncivilized sections of the United States. However, since experience should have taught him that he was trading on dangerous ground in depending upon French stability, it is difficult to feel any sympathy for him in his misplaced confidence. History shows that France is as unstable as the wind and the man who wagers that any condition of affairs will remain in force for forty-eight hours in the French republic is taking a foolish risk.

It is announced that Mr. Marcus Hanna will make several speeches in the close districts in the Buckeye State, and it is further announced that he has been preparing notes for these addresses that are to help the Republicans in his native State stem the tide at the coming election. The denunciation of the notes has not yet been definitely given out.

The authorities at Washington have been officially informed that there are now no mines in the harbor of Havana.

To the Public.
It having come to our knowledge that reports have been circulated that Joseph Hantz has sold diseased meat and that A. L. Parker has sold milk from diseased cows, we, the undersigned, take this method of branding these reports as absolutely false. Dr. Deville and Dr. Roup, veterinary surgeons, and Mr. Sol Miller, cattle inspector, will testify to the fact that the milk and cattle handled by the undersigned, respectively, are healthy and in good condition. The reports referred to above were circulated with malicious intent for the purpose of injuring our business. They are wholly without foundation.

AS TOLD BY THE BARKEEP.
"My place, you know, is a popular haub with professional men, and I have a good many lawyers among my customers. Now lawyers are rather peculiar drinkers, as my experience goes. They come for the same drink all the year round, unless it is a case where the favorite tipple happens to be mint julep. Then it's whiskey punch in winter. A lawyer will hang on to a favorite drink years after he has relinquished his hold on a favorite client in chancery."

"Well, the two New York drummers who were drinking sherry cobbiers in my place that morning didn't know that, of course, but when one of my regular attorneys dropped in for the drink of whiskey and mint julep, which he never would think of going to his office without, they paused in their conversation to size him up. The lawyer had the morning paper in his hand and as he leaned against the bar without a word, my bartender produced the decanters needed, and the drink poured out, swallowed and paid for, the customer leaving as silently as he had entered. Another of the 'regulars' dropped in a couple of minutes later and said hello to the bartender, who immediately served him with a cocktail. You ought to have seen that brace of Yorkers stare. But when half a dozen more of the 'regulars' came in and were served in the same fashion the drummers almost collapsed."

"One of them came over to me, took me by the lapel, led me over into a corner and said: 'I'm a travelled man, but that bartender of yours has a way of serving customers that's a brand new wrinkle to me. He's an astonisher. How does he do it without getting the order?'"

"I led him over to the opposite corner, glanced furtively around, as if fearing I might be overheard, and whispered: 'Shut your mouth!'"

"You don't say so?" he exclaimed seriously, glancing out of the corner of his eye at the marvel behind the bar. And I almost swore he believed me."

"I'm a travelled man," he said, "and I'm a bird catcher. The early bird catches the worm."

"Wildcats—Let him. Who wants to catch worms, anyhow?"

APPEARANCES ARE DECEPTIVE.
The janitor was showing the visitor over the newspaper building and they had arrived at the editorial rooms. "That man writing at the desk over there by the window, with his other arm in a sling—the gentleman with the scalp wounds and the broken nose—he's the fighting editor, isn't he?" asked the visitor in a whisper, as he regarded the writer indicated with a feeling of awe.

The janitor bestowed upon his questioner a look of mingled compassion and contempt.

"Now," he answered, "there's no fight in him. He writes the funny column and then little tokens you notice represents the mistakes he made this week in picking his subjects."

CHATTER.
It is a question whether the French people or the French political rulers are the more distrustful of the other.

The police are now kept busy garnering the tramp crop.

It is rather easier to guess the whereabouts of the Maria Teresa now than when she was with the jack-of-lantern Cape Verde fleet.
