

General Intelligence.

From the Philadelphia Gazette, 6th inst.
Daring Robberies.—About 6 o'clock on Sunday evening, the boot store of Mr. Young, on Ninth street, above Filbert, was entered by a daring thief, and the boot store, which was a large one, consisting of handsome and fashionable boots. The thief also took from a show case a fancy tin box, which contained a lease, and other valuable papers. The front door of the house was shut, but not locked, and the family, who were sitting in the back room, heard a heavy footstep. Mr. Young went into the store, and discovered that he had been robbed. He thought he saw a man going out of the front doorway, and immediately gave chase, but the thief had disappeared from him seeing which way the thief had gone.

He returned to the house, and while searching the door he saw a man who had been following the call, and stumbled over the tin box, which was on the step. It was forced open, but the thief finding nothing in it besides papers valuable only to the owner, must have been satisfied with it, and then took a hasty retreat. One pair of the boots stolen, was in the best manner, and exhibited in the Franklin Institute, are valued highly.

Size entrance into the store was effected through a door leading from the private entry of the house, and the thief is believed to have been some one well acquainted with the arrangement of the premises. A few nights ago, either the same rascal, or some other daring fellow, smashed a pane of glass in the show window of Mr. Young, but was compelled to flee without taking anything.

Sunday afternoon, about four o'clock, a bold fellow entered a private boarding-house, a few doors north of Mr. Young's place of business, ascended the stairs, and walked into a room. A lady who was sitting at a table, and looking towards the stairs, told the person who occupied the apartment that a man must be in her room. She supposed not, but went up to see.

In opening the door, she was discovered. He exhibited remarkable coolness under the circumstances, and said he wished to see a lady boarder named Williams. On being told that no person of that name lived there, he exclaimed, "I am not the man you are looking for, but I have caught him by the arm and detained him, and he gave her such assurances that all was right, she was thrown off her guard, and allowed him to depart without making any objection." A continuation of a number of articles of ladies' wearing apparel were found gathered and tied up in a merino shawl, ready to be carried away.

A bottle of jelly and a quantity of cakes intended for supper were taken from a closet in the dining-room, from which it may be inferred that the daring thief had been there first. The only articles taken from up stairs were a hair brush and a book. A clothes press in an entry had been ransacked.

About half-past four o'clock, as the keeper of the boarding-house was standing in company with a lady on the front door step, a young man, who appeared nervous and suspicious, came by, and presently he made a hasty retreat, and ran down Filbert street. He was the same person who had paid the boarding-house a visit.

At an earlier hour in the residence of a wealthy family in the same neighborhood was entered by a young man, who succeeded in making quite a haul. The family were at church, and the thief who was in the kitchen. The thief had only one about the house was a servant, and the thief had the fence, and the notice attracting the attention of the domestic, she went into the yard and met him.

On being accosted, he replied that he wished to see his brother, who told him to get over the fence and come into the kitchen. He found that he had made a mistake in the house, and asked the way to get out. The girl showed him the way, and he returned to the kitchen. The daring fellow, instead of going out, went into the house and stole a solid silver ten-pot, several silk and velvet dresses, and a quantity of coats, &c., with which he escaped. From all accounts, he must have been the same thief who afterwards paid a visit to the boarding-house, and perhaps the very one who robbed the boot store.

This is the season of the year when deceptions, like the above, generally commence. Housekeepers cannot be too guarded, and the police should be particularly vigilant.

Obstructions of the Telegraph.—Several weeks since the telegraphic operators were not able to communicate with Mobile, although the cables engaged in the Lancaster, Pa. wire reported the wires up throughout the whole course. This led to an examination, when it was found that below Peach Tree, in Wilcox county, the wires had been cut by a snake, which had completely destroyed the communication—for several days past the same difficulty has occurred, no communication could be made with Mobile, though the cables engaged in the Lancaster, Pa. wire, and an operator commenced testing the wire with a magnet, and about five miles below this city, found that he could "get" Mobile, but not Montgomery—further testing, however, showed that the wire had been cut by a snake, and when communication could be made within a few yards—south with Mobile, and north with Montgomery. On taking down the wire, an ingenious operator discovered, which was cut by a snake, and completely insulated it, without increasing its bulk, or changing its appearance, so as to be observed from the ground. This was effected by removing a section of the wire, about six inches, and substituting a silk cord, sufficient to sustain the ends, and covered with a non-conducting preparation which resembled the wire in appearance. The deception was complete, and was only detected by the magnet. Whether this was done by persons speculating in foreign cotton accounts, or by agents of conflicting lines, has not yet been ascertained. The skill and care however which it is effected, indicates an important purpose of some nature.

We believe these outrages are, by the present laws of the State, classed merely as trespasses. They should be made criminal, and the penalties—Montgomery (Ala.) Journal, Nov. 20.

Cotton Factories.—The cotton factories in Allegheny have all recommenced operations, and are now in full operation. The proprietors of the Bannock and Banner works, (all that are now in operation) reduced the hours of labor to the same time that was agreed upon by the proprietors and operators at the recent strike in Lancaster, Pa. Lowell, Mass. The number of hands that are employed in these mills is more than one thousand, and the whole number of persons depending on them for a subsistence, is about five thousand. There are also over three thousand dollars a week distributed among them, which makes a total of some hundred and fifty thousand dollars during the year.

The Penn Mill has commenced operations with two new and splendid engines of two hundred horse power, which have been recently put up in their engine-room. Their former engines, which were only half the power, were found to be too small to run all their machinery, and they had these mammoth ones built to supply their place. They are good engines, and work admirably, and have given great satisfaction.

The proprietors of the Eagle Cotton Works are negotiating for the erection of an additional large four-story building on their premises, with a front of 217 feet on Sandusky street.—Pittsburg Amer.

Broke Jail.—Johnson Jones, who was confined in the Kanawha jail under sentence to the penitentiary for horse stealing, was taken to the court, where he was committed to the penitentiary, confined in the same apartment, intended to have escaped through the same hole, and there got his boots, coat, and pocket-book; but when he tried to get out, he found that he was found, and his sorrow, it was too big, and there he stuck fast, unable to move either way. Jones then picked up Roberts's property and fled, while becoming a fugitive, he was captured, and given the alarm, but Jones, in his unpleasant position, gives the alarm, but Jones, in his unpleasant position, gives the alarm, but Jones, in his unpleasant position, gives the alarm.

The Charleston Republican says of Jones: He is a young man of education—has proved that he has considerable talent for writing. His prospectus for a paper were found to be very good, written last summer, while in jail, was by Messrs. Harper & Brothers, of New York, seemed worthy of a place in their magazine.

Last Saturday a man presented himself to the officers of the Jeffersonville (Ind.) penitentiary, and demanded the privilege of being put to rest, saying that he owed the State five hundred dollars, and he was determined to pay it. It was ascertained as to his right of admission, he stated that he had been confined at a recent term of the court, where he was sentenced to the penitentiary, and had broken jail. Although a reward was offered for his arrest, he had baffled pursuit to that time. His singular request was complied with.
