Superior Court of Pennsylvania Rendered Decision Against Ticket Brokers.

Vested in Company Which Must Also Redeem Unused Tickets-Dividends Declared-Clover Leaf Plans-Notes.

An important decision has just been given by the Superior Court of Pennsylvania in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Keary. It affects the traveling public railroad companies and ticket brokers. It gives the railroads the exclusive right to sell their tickets, and thus bars manipulation by

Keary was a Pittsburg ticket broker and contested the constitutionality of the act of May 6, 1863, under which he had been convicted. He also contended that the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution was violated by the act, which "impaired the obligation of contracts," and was an attempt "to regulate commerce among

Judge Porter decides that the act is not in violation of the provision of the fourteenth amendment, because that amendment was not designed to interfere with the power of the State, sometimes termed the police power, to prescribe regulations to promote the health, peace, morals, education and good order of the people. He points out that, under the act, the railroad company is required to purchase the un used portion of a ticket, so that the holder thereof is not deprived of property.

"The appellant," says Judge Porter, "is not in the position of one innocently selling an unusued portion of a ticket bought in good faith. He is confessedly conducting a business at which the act of the Assembly directly strikes, and which the Legislature has said is prolific of fraudulent results. The appellant is not deprived of any property of which he is honestly the owner, nor is he prevented from prosecuting a business of a kind recognized by the law as respectable. The privileges and immunities protected by the Constitution are subject o such restraints as the Government may prescribe for the general good of the whole ople. The appellant has, therefore, no right to complain of the restriction put upon his business, which has been stigmatized as conducive to fraudulent acts and prac-
