A JEROME DELEGATE

How His Gripsack Was Packed When He Came to Phoenix.

Jerome, Ariz., Sept. 13.—(Special correspondence of the Republican.)—I would like to ask for information what has become of the project to build a wagon road from Jerome to the mining district south of here. The scheme seemed on the point of materialization a short time ago, and now there seems to be nothing more heard of it. The owners of property in the district that would be opened up cannot afford to let the matter rest until the road is built. The business men of Jerome cannot afford to let the matter drop either. With the road completed to the Copper Chief mine, the district would be opened up to the south, and transportation would be cheapened to those points so much that the road would pay for itself within a year. As it is, freight to the Copper Chief must be hauled down to the valley and back up the mountain to the camp. With the road on the line of the survey Mr. Trendwell had made recently, the hauling in that line after which he will settle down in Jerome to practice general medicine and surgery.

to Phoenix as a delegate to the convention. Other people in Jerome have relatives in the strike city, and all are desirous to hear the worst. James O'Connell has returned from his trip to Yuma, where he was sent for a year for cutting a Chinaman in the neck with a broad knife, while under the influence of liquor. Jimmie looks well and strong and has grown a great crop of whiskers while in retirement. He has no kick to make regarding his treatment while in confinement. He thinks the sentence imposed on him by Judge Sloan was a just one. He remembers nothing about cutting the Chinaman. When asked Jimmie is a quiet and orderly citizen.

NEWS OF THE VERDE

Politics, Try Weather and Range Matters Discussed.

Verde, Ariz., Sept. 12.—(Special correspondence of the Republican.)—Feeling the need of a little rest from the excruciating heat of a summer, your correspondent has been away a few days ago to Middle Verde, the home of his childhood. Although a year has elapsed since our last visit to Middle Verde, there have been but few changes made by the people. They live on month after month and year after year in the same routine of life, apparently contented and happy, preaching that satisfaction in the value of our country. Now is ending the middle of a year of the Verdeites are a little else, their hospitality, taken as a whole, cannot be surpassed.

There are some excellent farms on the Middle Verde, with an abundance of water for irrigation, and the richness of the land is a remarkable feature. Hay is the principal crop, although some corn and vegetables are raised, mostly for home consumption. The outside range for stock is in a very poor condition, and should we have a severe winter there will be but few range cattle left in the spring. Much hay is being bought on the Lower Verde for the purpose of feeding stock, 200 tons being bought on one ranch at seven dollars per ton. Mr. W. A. Jones will start to Chaperon on Tuesday morning, Sept. 11, with a load of vegetables. There was a large crop of melons raised in the valley this summer, and they have been sold very rapidly at a fair price in the surrounding markets. Rev. R. A. Windsor and family will leave for Stockton, California, sometime during the week. In the departure of Mr. Windsor from the community we lose a respected citizen and a neighbor, one who has always been a help to the community, especially in a religious capacity. Some parties from Phoenix have been on the Verde trying to rent ranches for next year. It appears that they did not do down as Phoenix this year. There are several good ranches on the Verde for rent and quite a number for sale. The fall wind continues to blow, with no indications of a rain at present. The outlook for stockmen is very discouraging. The democratic convention has met and nominated their officers for Yavapai county, and no doubt but they have some very good men in the field, but when the republican convention meets they shall try and then support them. We have had democratic officers now for a number of years, and although they have acquitted themselves very creditably, as far as we know, we think a change for awhile would be very agreeable, and to bring about that change we must support our party exclusively and if we cannot support it exclusively we had better not support it at all. I believe in a man being or doing one thing at a time. If you are a republican, vote the republican ticket straight out, and then if your party are not elected you are not to blame; you have done your duty. It is time the parties sometimes nominate men that we feel we cannot support with our vote—men that would be a detriment to the party in such cases on no vote for them at all on either ticket. Support your party; draw party lines; then we will know how the country stands in regard to politics.

A TINY BOY HELD THE REINS.

He Drove a Pair in 2128 and Won a Loving Cup for His Trick.

One of the most remarkable exhibitions of driving a racing horse ever witnessed in New Jersey was that given by David C. Small, Jr., son of David C. Small, of Plainfield, N. J. The youngster drove Ned Davis, record 2:12, a mile in 2:28. David Jr. is one of the familiar figures at the Saturday matinee races of the Gentlemen's Driving association at the race courses on Park avenue, Plainfield, and has repeatedly urged his father to let him drive Ned Davis around the track. His father, however, has been fearful of trusting the pace in the boy's hands. Last week J. Wesley Johnson, president of the first National bank, a well known horseman, who has been much interested in the boy, told him that if his father would let him drive the pace a trial mile he would give him a loving cup if he made the mile in less than three minutes. After much persuasion the lad finally secured the consent of his father. He was lifted into the sulky and started down the track at a rapid pace. The little fellow displayed great horsemanship. He kept a tight rein over the pacer and never once permitted him to leave his feet. When it was announced that the boy had driven the pace within three seconds of his record, there were many exclamations of surprise. Philadelphia N. A. American.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

No man is wise if he boasts of his superior wisdom. The average dreamer is a misanthrope. But few men appear to be as good as they really are. Let's wife resembled a weather vane when she turned around. A good name is better than great riches—and also less common. Men add to their years, but not to ways to their good deeds. There is a vast difference between a sheriff's sale and a sheriff's life. Pessimism is often a characteristic of people who are chronic dyspeptics. Blessed is the bald headed man. He never gets his hair out when the barber shop is crowded. An Irish philosopher says there is no blessing like health—especially when a fellow is sick. A girl may not see anything about her best fellow to laugh at, but his mustache is apt to tickle her—Chicago News.

BON MOT.

"Why is it?" demanded the Sultan, that you always blame poor Kurds for everything?" The ambassador of the joint powers replied and prepared a joint note. "Your majesty's words are most flattering," they protested, in this, humorously, albeit something apocryphal. An occasional bon mot like the foregoing serves greatly to relieve the tedium of diplomatic negotiations.—Detroit Journal.

QUITE PROTRACTED.

"We are just holding a love feast," said young Mr. Liner, unobtrusively, to Mr. Frisbie, when that father of an engaged daughter put his head in at the parlor door at 11:35 p. m. "I thought it must be a protracted meeting," said the old gentleman, as he withdrew.—Harper's Bazar.

SUCCESS IN BUSINESS.

A. S. Hewitt and Richard Croker on Business Prospects of Young Men.

Richard Croker says that the young men today have no chance in business on account of the trusts, and he therefore advises them to spout for Tammany, whether they know how to talk or not. Mr. Abraham S. Hewitt, in the Commercial Advertiser, ventures to call in question the truth of this statement and the soundness of the advice which accompanies it. He says that large corporations, instead of discouraging young men of ability and character are actually looking for them all the time. Speaking for a company in which he is interested he adds: "I need five or six of them, young men who are willing to begin at the bottom and work up. There is no one inside to keep them there. Industry and enterprise are increasing and new enterprises are being undertaken. The government statistics of imports and exports show this. People are not dying any less today than they did in the past. Who is going to take their places? It is the competent young men and there is comparatively few of them."

Young men of ability who are not afraid to work hard for success will find no serious obstacle in their path today. But if their idea is to saunter into a business house and graciously accept a junior partnership offer, it must be admitted they will find little to encourage them. Mr. Hewitt apparently thinks that the leader of Tammany had this type of young men in his mind, for he asks: "What did Mr. Croker want for his sons in the Roosevelt concern? Did he want them to begin at the bottom of the firm which the Roosevelts had built up after forty years of work? Judging from the reports of the Mayor's hearing, Mr. Croker wanted them to get in as partners and was disappointed because they could not in fifty minutes get to the head of a firm which it had taken forty years to build up."

But, however it may be in Mr. Croker's own family, it is a fact that many young men today desire to reach the goal of success at once, and success, as they understand it, means the acquisition of great wealth. That such young men should fail at the modern methods of business is entirely natural; for, except in rare instances, great fortunes are made only by exceptionally able men, who are ready if need be to work like a galley slave twelve or fourteen hours a day for the best part of their lives. The "trusts," as Mr. Croker indiscriminately calls all large corporations, are looking for such men, and when they find them they take good care not to lose them. Not long ago the head of a great business enterprise said: "If I could find a young man who could take all the care of my business off my shoulders, I stand ready to pay him a salary of $100,000 a year for life." But he hasn't found the young man yet, although no phenomenal ability is needed to master the details of the business.—New York Tribune.
