A REMARKABLE CASE

And One That Should Arouse Charitable Interest.

About a week ago this paper published the details of a terrible case of burning, announcing that the victim, Miss Trinidad Ballesteros, could not possibly recover. In the opinion of her physician, she is still alive and doing better than anybody at the time of the accident could reasonably hope for. Her physician still maintains that should she recover it will be a case remarkable in the records of such terrible incidents, and the experience of medical men warrants the statement that everything is against her in the way of precedent. Still, she is doing well and her wounds are healing more rapidly than burns usually do, though she has had a very high fever for the last three days. Until recently she has suffered but very little pain, though the process has begun that creates a pain she can hardly be relieved of.

The accident, as will be remembered, occurred by her apron taking fire at a stove, and nearly all her clothing was burned off. Both her lower limbs were burned severely between the ankle and knee. From a point a little above the knee clear to the neck, almost the entire surface is burned except a little area between the shoulderblades. Her face was not burned, but her arms and hands were both burned, in places very badly. The burning was less severe on her lower limbs and there is hope that the hurt is not deep enough there to destroy the inner skin. The worst burning was on the breast and abdomen, where the flesh was literally cooked, hard and dry. Yet withal, her symptoms and condition thus far have been of the most hopeful nature for her recovery. The fear is that she will be assailed by some internal disorder consequent on the non-performance of the functions of the skin. Some idea of the burned surface may be understood when it is stated that it takes about a gallon of lime water to bathe her wounds at each dressing.

These particulars are interesting to know as illustrating under what terrible conditions the little sufferer is battling for life, but the purpose of this article is to call the attention of some of the ladies' societies, or other charitable organizations, to the distressing circumstances in which the afflicted family is situated, for they are practically without funds or resources. They reside on Cleveland street almost due south of the east end school house. The father of the girl is dead, and her mother, who left for Mexico only a day or two before the accident and who was informed as soon as possible, could not get home again till Saturday. The only other member of the family is an older sister, who was its main support, she being employed at the Sisters' hospital. Since the accident she has of course been more than busy in nursing her suffering sister.

The wants of the family are presumably such that not only money and the substantial of life would materially aid them, but quite likely the kindly attention of those capable of ministering to the suffering would also be acceptable. This statement, however, is made on information furnished by those knowing the conditions and not through the solicitation of the family, but it is certainly a worthy case for those seeking an opportunity to do good.

NEW MAGAZINES

Some Good Ones Are Entering the Ten Cent Field.

More and more new magazines for the dissemination of the short story are coming into the market and the first appearance of many of them is a strong bid for popular favor.

One of the latest and best is the Red Book, printed by the Red Book corporation of Chicago, whose third number of the first volume reached this office yesterday, showing an improvement over the preceding numbers.

In the matter of illustrations it compares favorably with the more expensive periodicals (it is a 10 cent magazine). It contains among other things a series of photographic art studies in color, illustrating types of American beauty. There are eighty-five pages of reading matter, containing fifteen short stories, and all of them are good. Only original stories are printed and ambitious writers are invited to try for representation in the Red Book. Notwithstanding its youth the Red Book has already secured a very good advertising patronage. The cover of the magazine is especially attractive.

Another of the new magazines is The Frontier, a Denver publication and an exceedingly creditable one. If any fault may be found with it, it is that it may be too local, devoting its pages to the very laudable purpose, though possibly not a very profitable one, of exploiting the financial, social and scenic advantages of the west and the southwest.

It is a matter of doubt if the sparse population of the country west of the Rocky mountains will support a publication of this character. There may be too much locality. The Frontier, though, deserves support.

Though the interior of the building was destroyed, the employees succeeded in removing the bulk of the jewelry. A number of employees were rescued from the roof by firemen.

Lost Confidence

"He who has lost confidence can lose nothing more"—So runs the old adage. Many have lost confidence in glasses and the optician's ability to fit them, simply because they have tried many and found no satisfaction, no relief, nothing but discomfort and annoyance.

If you are one of these discouraged, non-confident sort, we are firm in the belief that we can fully restore confidence and give entire satisfaction.
