THE Sohmer Cecilian Piano

"Played by Hand or Foot"

This piano yields its stores of melody as freely to the person who knows nothing about music as it does to the one who has spent years in practice and study of music playing, and its dual nature enables it to completely and perfectly satisfy the demands of both, for it can be played just like any other piano—with the fingers; or, it can be played by means of the mechanism of the Cecilian Piano Player, which is built into it.

By means of this mechanism any one can play this piano—just slip in a roll of perforated music, put your feet on the pedals, and pump—any one, young or old, can do that! All the technical part of the work is done by the Cecilian Piano Player, yet your control over it is so absolute and perfect that you can put into the performance all the individual expression and spirit of which you are capable. The Sohmer-Cecilian Piano has a full, rich, sweet tone, a quick responsive action and its construction throughout is the very best. It is "high grade" in every particular. The price is $350. It can be bought on easy monthly payments, and your old piano will be taken in exchange at its full market value.

Let us send you a detailed description of the Sohmer-Cecilian Piano. Simply drop us a postcard. It will interest you.

THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY TOO SWIFT FOR TUCSON

The Trouble the Natives Have in Getting Used to It.

Tucson, like every other struggling municipality, is to be congratulated on her new street cars. Electric cars are a necessity in these days and every city has to have them before it amounts to much. Still a town ought not to exert itself beyond its strength. Every child has to learn to walk before he can run and there seems to be grave doubt whether Tucson after 340 years of childhood has yet got beyond the walking age.

Tucson has had street cars now for three or four weeks and is proud of it. And Arizona is proud of Tucson, but she must remember that modern utilities must be handled with care. Gas, electricity and whiskey are three valuable servants of man when he can keep them in control, but each and all of them are cruel and relentless masters. The installation of the street car service was hailed with loud acclaim. The big man of the town turned on the juice and away went the rolling stock amid the plaudits of the multitude.

Since that time, just a few brief days ago, one man has been killed by being thrown from a car and a similar accident to another citizen occurred last Saturday night though it did not end fatally. There have been numerous minor troubles reported, a large part of the news in the Tucson papers being made up of street car incidents. On one occasion a handsome young lady with two slippers got off the car barefooted or at least with nothing on but her stockings, which in these open work days amounts to about the same thing. A half dozen young gallants ran after the car to save the shoe and protect the foot so they might with assurance ask for the hand. Bulletins of their success will doubtless appear later in the Tucson prints.

These incidents and others related, lead to the serious consideration of the question whether Tucson is yet mature enough to have electric cars and whether or not she invited her undoing when she relegated the old mule system to the scrap heap.

THE BUSY LITTLE ANTS

What An Observer Saw, the Intelligent Insects Do.

A writer in the London News describes a little town of ants which he observed under a magnifying glass at a recent exhibition. He says:

"I watched them for a long time, and saw that they are very wise, for they believe in co-operation; that is, in helping one another. Some grain had been scattered in this little country of theirs, and they were getting it together in one place. Sometimes, when one ant found that he alone could not move a large grain, he fetched helpers, and, so working together, they shifted it, and placed each grain by the side of another, like a builder would lay his bricks when making a wall."

"The little ants formed quite a little city, and had even made roads and streets, along which they were continually running at their work. Yes, Ant-town, for we must give their city a name, was full of busy little people. All had some duty to do. Those who were not working from a car and a similar accident to another citizen occurred last Saturday night though it did not end fatally. There have been numerous minor troubles reported, a large part of the news in the Tucson papers being made up of street car incidents. On one occasion a handsome young lady with two slippers got off the car barefooted or at least with nothing on but her stockings, which in these open work days amounts to about the same thing. A half dozen young gallants ran after the car to save the shoe and protect the foot so they might with assurance

"The intelligence of these wonderful little insects is marvelous. A traveler in the desert has often told me that ants were once journeying when they came to a railway. Time after time, while crossing it, a train would come along and kill hundreds of them, so what do you think these wise ants did? They actually made tunnels underneath the railway lines, and so passed through safely."

"Now English ants do not lay in a store of food for the winter, as many think, but they collect leaves, for they can feed on the fungus which grows on damp leaves. However, they do store their eggs during the winter, so that the young workers can be hatched in the summer. It is then that the ants again show how intelligent and wise they are, for the eggs are hatched by the warmth of the sun, and in the hills there are numerous little rooms, called 'cells,' some near the surface of the earth and others farther underneath, and ants shift the eggs every day, either upstairs or downstairs, in order that they shall not get too hot or too cold, for that would kill the little ants inside."

"I sometimes think that ants must be jolly people, for they are so busy, and seem so full of life and health. It is no doubt because they are always trying to do something, for lazy people are not really happy."

A man must have a queer financial sense to lead a double life with two families.—New York Press.

JOE SOLO'S WILL ADMITTED TO PROBATE

The Distribution of His Estate Among Relatives in Italy.

The will of Giuseppe Tognacoli was admitted to probate yesterday. Tognacoli was a well known cattleman of this part of the country, though he was better known by the name of Joe Solo to which his foreign name had been shortened by the early settlers, who had so much other work to do that they could not afford to spend much time with long-winded names.

Tognacoli died at San Diego about three weeks ago and his body was brought back here for burial. His estate consists mostly of cattle running on the range on Humboldt creek, not far from its junction with the Agua Fria. The value of it is unknown, but it is supposed to be worth about $12,000. Frank J. Aldre is named in the will as the executor of the estate.

The only relative in this part of the country is Joe Padrona, a nephew, who is to receive under the will twenty-five head of cattle and if it is found advisable to sell the range, he is also to be allowed that. But if the range shall be sold the proceeds of the sale are to be turned into the estate and to be divided under the provisions of the will.

There is bequeathed to the mother of Tognacoli, Maria Tognacoli nee Padrona of Villa di Chiavenna, Italy, the sum of $1000. A like sum will go to the aunt of the testator, Domenica Padrona of the same place. In case either or both of these beneficiaries should die before the distribution of the estate the sums bequeathed to them shall revert to the estate and it shall then be divided equally between the brother and sister of the testator, Giovanni Tognacoli, and Caterina Marafin, both of Villa di Chiavenna.

SUPERSTITIONS OF SAILORS.

Some Uncanny Phenomena That Assail the Seafaring Man.

All sailors are superstitious, and the legends of the sea are legion, ranging from phantom ships to spectral lights suddenly gleaming from yarmards and mastsheads. That many of these legends are very ancient may be proved by the fact that sea harpies are described by Homer and Hesiod, while according to Virgil they plundered Aeneas during his voyage to Italy. The beautiful sirens, too, are of classic origin.

Weird, indeed are the tales of haunting spectres, fit to send one's nerves a shiver after a hearty supper, well suited for Christmas time ghost stories. There are the four goblins of Dunster's Ness, not ghosts, but evil water spirits, who appear twice a year, only in midwinter, but bring bad luck in a very short time to the ship from which they are sighted. We must mention Adamaster, the dreaded ghost of the Cape, that used to be seen in a halo of cloud and mist over Good Hope, and also the silent man of Westford harbor, the wandering of the Dutch skipper who lost his smack on his way to Dublin some three centuries ago.

Ghostly apparitions are not, however, the only ones to be feared at sea. In the case of St. Elmo's fire these apparitions take the shape of spectral lights suddenly gleaming from yarmards or mastsheads. It was known by ancient navigators as Castor and Pollux—the best omen if seen double, but a signal of danger if seen single.

Jack has a score of well known superstitions, many of which are of very long descent, such as the presence of figure-heads, the blessing of ships and the "crossing of the line." And it will be remembered that the prince and princess of Wales both paid tribute to old Neptune while on their journey to Australia.

SCORES OF DISTANT FRIENDS

To Be Delighted by Gifts From the Big Curio Store.

There is another busy rush at Balke's Big Curio store. So many Phoenix people are getting ready to go away to visit friends in different parts of the country and they want to take with them gifts which they think will be appreciated. They are aware that there is no other place like the Big Curio store to find such a variety of gifts, and especially at such prices as are now prevailing there. They are sure of taking to their friends something that they cannot buy at home and which will therefore be all the more valued.

There is a great variety of Navajo silver jewelry, Mexican carved leather work, burnt leather pillows, genuine Mexican drawn work and Mexican zepes. Among those who have bought largely of the gifts for friends abroad is Mrs. Julia Lount who writes in a letter to the Phoenix Herald, dated June 22, 1906, that she had visited to her daughter and grand daughter. Two especially handsome gifts purchased by her were the most expensive of the Navajo silver bracelets, the demand for which is increasing so rapidly that so rapidly that it is amounting to a furore. The assured genuineness of the articles adds much to their value.

Those attractive prices on everything will prevail throughout the summer or until the opening of the coming season. Mr. Balke is, by the way, rapidly arranging his affairs so that he can set out on his annual purchasing tour, which will be one of the most extensive he has ever taken, and he will arrange in the course of it for the most extensive collection of curios and useful articles ever collected together in the southwest.

THE SAVING SENSE OF HUMOR.

The Rev. W. A. Quayle suggested, in an address at the First Methodist church of Englewood Sunday afternoon, that many civic problems would become much easier of solution if the responsible public officials could somehow have injected into them a proper and saving sense of humor.

There is great merit in this suggestion, clearly appears from the case of local interest by the Rev. Quayle illustrated the point. He recalled how his hearers pass daily along streets where the pavements are full of holes so wide and deep that loaded teams could hardly get along at all were it not for the paving. In town they saw the holes, but in the country they saw car tracks, put in and kept in order not by the "government of the people" but by a "senseless corporation."

"Then as you amble along," he continued, "you hear some talk about the city running the street cars. That's a joke, isn't it? Imagine them running the street cars when they cannot keep the holes out of the streets."

According to the most modern philosophers laughter, the product of the sense of humor, is not an expression of the emotions of joy and peace but of destruction and warfare. In proof they point out that laughter is invariably excited by the ignorance, the folly, or the misfortunes of others.

Whether this be exactly true or not might be endlessly debated. It is certainly true that a sense of humor and the laughter which expresses it are great and beneficial correctors of folly, and especially of one's own folly. The man who looks on life neither frivolously nor too seriously, but with a saving sense of humor, may be wicked, but he will never be that creature without whom wickedness could not thrive, a fool who thinks himself wise.

For it is unquestionably true that men harm themselves and each other, individually and collectively, by their folly more than by their willful wickedness. If there is a blessing for which each of us ought to pray daily and hourly, it is for the saving sense of humor to keep us from folly.—From the Chicago Inter Ocean.

LARGE NITER BEDS.

Indications That California May Become Competitor of Chile.

Chile, which has for many years provided the world with its supply of niter, is likely to have a formidable competitor in the state of California. Niter is the material which forms the basis of gunpowder manufacture. State Mineralogist Aubrey of California thinks he knows where he can go in that state to put his hand on big niter beds and the United States geological survey has been sufficiently interested in his statements to undertake a special inquiry, which it will do next fall.

The niter beds of California are in the northern part of San Bernardino county, and in the southern part of Inyo county. The nitrates are found in round knobs, buttes and ridges ranging in height from 50 to 30 feet. The resemblances between the California and Chilean niter beds are marked and numerous.

The niter of both countries was formed under the same geological conditions and on the same huge scale. It is estimated by the California mining bureau that the niter districts of the state cover about 35,000 acres containing more than 22,000,000 tons.

Opportunities in Arizona

It is a well known fact that there are good positions and exceptionally fine business openings in Arizona waiting for the young man or woman who has a practical business education, and who is thus ready to take advantage of these opportunities. You need have no fear about a position if you will take a little time to prepare for it.
