Better think this matter over carefully, as it costs to experiment, and what's the use, when Sherwin-Williams have spent years of careful study to make a paint that will stand the weather and one that is a good preserver. They are ready-mixed with a full measure in every can. Call and get a color card; see what a large number of colors you have to select from.

The Great Trials
of History

TRIAL OF
DR. PRITCHARD

One of the most exciting murder trials in Edinburgh in the past century was that of Dr. Edward Pritchard, which began on July 8, 1865, before Lord Arbuthnot and Jerviswood. The charge against Dr.
Pritchard was the murder of his wife and his mother-in-law in Glasgow. He was accused of having administered tartarized antimony, according to a patent medicine, to his mother-in-law, as well as in porter or beer, and in a patent medicine.
He was also accused of giving his wife the same dose in articles of food and of medicine.

The chief witness against the doctor was the family cook, Mary Latimer, who testified that during the preceding February Mrs. Pritchard was frequently sick, and that upon one occasion she said to her husband, when standing at her bedside, "Don't cry, for if you do you are a hypocrite."

A housemaid, Mary McLeod, detailed, during the examination of four hours, the circumstances of the death of Mrs. Pritchard and her mother.
Mrs. Taylor. During his wife's illness, she said, most of the time Pritchard was the only person who attended her, and that her attacks would invariably come after her meals. The housemaid also told of a promise the doctor had made to her that he would marry her, if his wife died. The prisoner gave her a ring, a brooch and a photograph of himself.

Another witness was a new cook, who had been secured in Mary Lat-imer's place. She arrived upon the day of Mrs. Taylor's death. Only on a few occasions had she been called upon to carry her mistress' meals to her room, but instead Dr. Pritchard always insisted in taking them to his wife.

Thomas Alexander Connell, a medical student who boarded with the Pritchards, was also an important witness. Dr. Patterson, a resident physician, was called in to prescribe for Mrs. Pritchard a short time before her death, which was so sudden that he reported to the register that Mrs. Pritchard's death was "extremely sudden, unexpected and to him, mysterious."

For the defense Dr. Cowan, of Edinburgh, a friend of Mrs. Pritchard's, deposed that Dr. Pritchard and Mrs. Taylor, the mother-in-law had lived on good terms with each other, and the prisoner's father-in-law said his daughter and Dr. Pritchard lived happily together.

A member of the Glasgow Apothecaries' Company was an important witness against the doctor, for he testified that Pritchard, within two or three months of the deaths, purchased more tartarized antimony than did all the rest of the Glasgow doctors together.

The doctors who examined the bodies found every evidence of poison. It was also brought out at the trial that Mrs. Taylor had control of $15,000 and that she had made a will leaving it to her daughter, and to Dr. Pritchard in the event of the daughters' death.

The most pathetic part of the trial was the examination of the eleven-year-old son and fourteen-year-old daughter of the Pritchards. The son said that his papa and mamma lived very happily together, and were very fond of one another. The prisoner was much affected when the children were under examination.

The Solicitor-General then addressed the jury for the Crown and contended that the only two persons who had any opportunity to perpetrate the murders were the prisoner and Mary McLeod, and that in the nature of the murder they could almost detect the finger of a doctor.

Mr. Clark, the chief attorney for the accused, in his address to the jury, contended that the prosecution had failed to trace the poisoning to the prisoner. The case was then summed up by Lord Justice Clerk.
The jury was only out an hour when they brought in a verdict of guilty against Dr. Pritchard of both murders. The prisoner was then sentenced to be executed at Glasgow on the twenty-eighth of July.

Some days after the trial the prisoner volunteered a confession to the Rev. Mr. Oldham, the clergyman who attended him, in which he declared himself, in a solemn statement in writing, which he drew up with great care and deliberation, to have been guilty of poisoning his wife but avowed his innocence of murdering his mother-in-law. Eight days later, however, he retracted this statement, and made a second confession in which he also admitted poisoning Mrs. Taylor. He was executed on the date originally set.

MOBILIZER CASE.

OPEN FORUM FOR DEBATING STATE WIDE PROHIBITION

The very important issue of statewide prohibition has been raised. A campaign in favor of a constitutional amendment will be shortly instituted.
This, like all other important questions has two sides, on each of which are found honest and intelligent persons.

The Republican has decided to provide for a reasonable discussion of this issue in its pages, allowing to each side at least a half column daily for signed articles, for which there will be no charge. No anonymous article will be published.

It is only stipulated that the communications for and against prohibi-

Alcoholism and Physical Deterioration

That alcoholic abuse does an incalculable harm no one denies. The official papers of the breweries and distilleries admit it, and every scientific and statistical fact demonstrates it beyond question. In all those states where the liquor traffic is free and unhindered the percentage of insane, tuberculous, criminal, weaklings and physically unfit is so far greater than in states where the traffic is somewhat curtailed (there being no real prohibition anywhere in the United States), that no thinking man can fail to see it.
New York state with 35,275 liquor dealers has one insane for every 230 people. Fifteen southern states with a total of 12,000 liquor dealers has one insane for every 830 people. The increase in insane is almost in exact ratio to the increase in liquor dealers.
Bezzola found that out of every seventy idiots in Switzerland, one-half were conceived during the "Swiss coroner" covering the fourteen weeks of the annual wine harvest, the other half being distributed through the balance of the year. A thorough statistical studies might be quoted. So firmly is the connection between alcoholic abuse and insanity, that medical science can foretell almost to a certainty the physical and mental characteristics of a child born of parents who were drunk at the time of conception. An epileptic or idiotic argues a drunken parent or grandparent.

But there is no dispute about the effect of excessive alcoholism upon either the immediate victim or his offspring. The entire contest hinges upon the effect or absence of effect of moderate quantities of alcohol upon the physical and mental stamina of the ordinary man or woman. The liquor partisans interested and disinterested, have taught and still teach, that moderate amounts of alcohol, not only are not detrimental but are beneficial. It is claimed that one cocktail a day or a glass of beer a day, or long periods of abstinence broken by a glass or two of wine at social gatherings are not detrimental but rather enhance the physical well-being or conduce to intellectual brilliancy. It is also claimed that prohibition of the privilege will lead to the abuse, that beer drinking tends to diminish the harm done by alcoholic excesses; that the beer and light wine countries do not show the effects of alcoholic excesses; that it is an unwarranted abuse of personal privilege to forbid the sale of liquors to moderate drinkers simply because some weaklings overdo the privilege.

All these statements are still being made, in spite of the dicta of science, of fact, and of economics, that they are not true.

What is the immediate and ultimate effect of alcohol in moderation on physical efficiency and upon physical and mental resistance to disease?
Can the moderate drinker or the occasional drinker be the progenitor of absolutely healthy heritage?

These are the questions scientific men and physiologists have long since answered, but the world still blindly refuses to see. Every atom of scientific proof is on the side which says that beginning with the first drop of alcohol, its effect is to diminish cell activity and lessen mental efficiency. Any apparent increase in mental brilliancy is due to depression,—it being a well-known psychic fact that when the higher intellectual centers are depressed, those of imagination and fancy are unbridled and an apparent intellectual brilliance results.

We frequently hear the argument that in the "good old days" fifty years ago, whiskey was on every sideboard and used by all members of the family, and consequently, there was no excessive alcoholism. This was true, and there were intellectual giants in those families, but there have been an appalling scarcity in the succeeding generations of those same families. There are several interesting statistical studies on the prominent families of fifty years ago; those families which drank whiskey in moderation, those families in which the mint julep and morning and evening "dram" was an institution have reaped a crop of alcoholic deaths in succeeding generations, of tuberculous offspring, of alcoholic sterility, which is one of the most startling demonstrations of the ultimate effect of moderate alcoholism in the history of the world. It will be seen, with a little study that these prominent families, north and south, have either become extinct, are rapidly becoming so or are, today, represented only by physical or moral weaklings.
There are exceptions, of course, but a little study will be convincing. They have followed the law of nature and have been eliminated as unfit. It may be true that a man can build into his protoplasmic structure, alcoholic effects and escape the immediate penalty but it is certainly true that the effects will follow Galton's Law of Heredity and appear in his progeny. The tendency will be established and that tendency will be just as great as is the alcoholic indulgence minus the individual power to resist the alcoholic poisoning. With one cocktail or beer a day, the tendency will not be far, but will be just as certainly present.

The hope of this and every other country is to have healthy babies, to have them born of a healthy parentage, caj and scientific declaration of the greatest scientists of both countries.

Drs. Bauer and Bollinger of Munich report that "beer drinker's heart" stands next to tuberculosis as the cause of death in Munich. Heimholtz, Kraepelin, Kurz, Voit, Schaeffer, Bayer, Bauer, Bollinger, Von Molke, among the greatest scientists of Germany, have established by the most exhaustive and delicate investigations on human beings, covering ten years and by statistical facts embracing the entire German empire, that the malt beverages of German diminish muscular and mental power, produce deterioration in offspring, are at the basis of the two scourges of Germany,—tuberculosis and heart disease. These studies have led to the public declaration by the German Emperor that the German army will lose its supremacy if beer drinking is not suppressed.

Among the causes of spinal tuberculosis, hip joint disease of children, lung tuberculosis and gland tuberculosis (scrofula) moderate alcoholism takes so high a place that the International Congress on Tuberculosis which met in Paris passed the following resolution:

"In view of the close connection between alcoholism and tuberculosis, this Congress strongly emphasizes the importance of combining the fight against tuberculosis with the struggle against alcoholism."

The evidence of science would fill this entire paper but the limited space allows only these general statements.
