CLEVELAND SUBURB FACES BANKRUPTCY AND OIL KING IS IN EXILE BECAUSE OFFICIALS SEEK TO TAX OIL STOCKS

FOREST HILL, EAST CLEVELAND

Wm. AGNEW

JOHN D. FACKLER

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

John D. Rockefeller is said to prove that he is a citizen of New York. According to his friends, he has abandoned his home near Cleveland for good, angered at the zeal of two tax commissioners who have listed him for $311,000,000 of stocks and bonds in Ohio, where he inadvertently spent the major part of last year.

The strange part is that neither of the commissioners, John D. Fackler and William Agnew, believe in any taxes on stocks and bonds whatever, nor, in fact, on any products of enterprise. They both believe that the taxation of valuable sites and natural resources would yield ample money to run the government.

"We simply treat Mr. Rockefeller like the law makes us treat John Jones," says Fackler. "If we could tax Mr. Rockefeller's opportunities, he would not monopolize opportunities as he does. The common fellow would have a better chance and we could afford to forget about stocks and bonds."

If the courts protect Rockefeller from the payment, the city of East Cleveland will not have money enough, under the existing legal rate of taxation, to run its affairs.

NATIONAL AUTHORITIES ON SUCCESSFUL MARRIED LIFE

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall Says a Husband Must Satisfy His Wife's Ambitions if He Would Be a Real Success

To be a successful husband a man must above all else satisfy his wife's ambition.

MRS. THOMAS R. MARSHALL, wife of the Vice President of the United States.

"If you want to interview me you'll have to come into the kitchen," said Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the vice president of the United States, former governor of Indiana and a successful husband. Mrs. Marshall led the way through the living room of her Scottsdale bungalow to the immaculate kitchenette where she hurriedly glanced over the simple refreshments she was to serve her guests later in the afternoon. As she opened the box of fragrant violets and arranged each leaf and flower she looked very handsome in her black chiffon gown. It was not an ultra smart costume, no doubt it was one of the simplest in Mrs. Marshall's wardrobe, but it was most becoming. The soft black veiled a dull rose messaline and a touch of gold lace on the bodice was an effective bit of contrasting color. She wore no jewels except four rings, a broad old-fashioned wedding ring, two large solitaires and an odd dinner ring, a peacock of platinum studded in emeralds and diamonds.

"I want to see that everything is all right," said the democratic wife of a democratic husband. "We are knitting for the soldiers. The neighbors came over this afternoon to start some helmets, mufflers and wristlets for the soldiers. I'm going to take them back to Washington Monday and those we fail to finish will have to be completed by my friends back there."

Mrs. Marshall belongs to the distinctively "womanly woman type" and her charm lies greatly in her sweetness, graciousness and dignity. She even admits being old-fashioned.

"I do not believe women need the same education as a man. I am moderate in everything and do not believe in women rushing into business when they do not have to do it. They are doing wrong to some one who has it to do--stealing their legitimate work but when girls are forced into business life, I believe in other women helping them with sympathy and patience as well as in a more material manner. And then there are the other women--the wives not satisfied with their home life. There are men, of course, who do not try the successful husband must above all else satisfy his wife's ambition." The wife who prefers being a leader to an homemaker is one of the outcomers of suffrage according to Mrs. Marshall, who is not afraid to say she does not believe in suffrage while in a suffrage state.

"There is nothing to be accomplished by suffrage and I do not believe it will ever be universal. It will be taken up state by state--in the west it will gain, perhaps. The western woman is different, more energetic, less conservative but take the women who head the cause in the east, look into their domestic life and you have the answer. I thoroughly believe in women being well informed on all questions of the day and a medium through which this may be accomplished is the woman's club."

Interest and a Certain Amount of Blindness Necessary Qualifications of a Successful Wife, Says the Vice-President

"To be a successful wife, a woman must be interested in her husband's success and shut her eyes to his follies."

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Vice President of the United States.

Twenty years of married life has convinced the vice president of the United States, that to be a successful wife one has but to be interested in her husband's success and overlook other things.

"Mrs. Marshall knows how to run a house, get servants and keep them," he said proudly and when asked if it were true that she could cook positively beamed. "Yes, but," he added in a hasty aside, "I wouldn't want to live on her cooking."

And he believes that cooking is as legitimate an office holding, and that the attitude toward cooking should be changed. Furthermore, if you want to get in the good graces of the vice president don't by any chance refer to the "classes" and "masses." Don't be a snob for here is his definition of a gentleman: "A gentleman is a man who works and feels that every other person who serves honestly is in the sight of law his equal. This applies to all. One of the biggest bores I ever met wore a dress suit while one of the most interesting of my acquaintances was a man in overalls."

"In fifty years from now the gentleman of America will be the man who owns the farm. It used to be that main strength and awkwardness were the requirements of a farmer but education has put it on a different basis today. The agricultural colleges have done much to advance the back to the farm movement which will be the salvation of this country with its over populated cities."

There is another change that Mr. Marshall hopes to see in this land of the free and home of the brave. It is his wish that more people learn to work with their hands and less with their wits.

"Education should be compulsory through the grades. When a boy is fourteen you can tell whether he's a student or not. If he wants to build chicken coops, pick the weeds, or fool with machinery why cram books down his throat? That boy should be sent to a technical school. It depends upon the sort of college and the sort of boy whether or not parents should make sacrifices to give him an education, a business man hardly requires four years or more of Latin and Greek, nor is Sanskrit necessary to the carpenter."

"You have a splendid system of education in Arizona. The vocational work that you advocate is excellent and you are training citizens along the right lines. Your schools are teaching the boys and girls to use both their heads and their hands. There are a thousand ways a girl can be useful even if she does not do actual work in the world. She can cook, clean house, keep accounts and make her clothes."

SINGLE HOUSE IS URGED BY POWERS

Schoolmasters' Club Hears Address on Legislation and Partial Report of School Law Committee

A legislative body consisting of a single house, composed of only 15 members, and a four year term for state officials, were among the changes in the state government advocated by T. T. Powers, representative from Maricopa county at the meeting of the Schoolmasters' club yesterday afternoon. The meeting was held at the Central school.

In an address on the general subject of legislation, Representative Powers presented a number of arguments in favor of a single house, to be composed of one member from each county and one member-at-large. He also strongly advocated lengthening the term of office for state officials to four years, both from the standpoint of reduced expense and greater efficiency.

That the recommendations of the state teachers' association will be embodied in a single bill, was the report of Superintendent John D. Loper of the law committee. A uniform system of school accounting, and the county unit plan, to be adopted at the option of the people of each county will be among the provisions of the new measure. These were endorsed at the recent conference between the taxpayers' organization, the school men of the state, and the law committee of the association. The final report of the committee will be submitted to the county association this week.

State Auditor J. C. Callaghan and State Examiner Phinkett, who were to have addressed the club on the subject of accounting, were unable to be present. The meeting of the pedagogues will be held with President A. J. Matthews of Tempe normal, January 22.
