MODE OF THE ANNUAL FASHION SHOWS

Winners in the undecided Fashion Show window description essay contests were announced yesterday by the judges, the last contests having been judged on the final day of the fall style exposition which had been in progress since Tuesday night.

The winners announced yesterday, with the names of the stores whose windows they described, were: Dishel Shoe Store-Mrs. Harry Seales, 107 North Twenty-first avenue.

As was the case the first day of the judging, many very creditable bits of descriptive writing were found. Every possible style of window display was employed by the contestants, and one of the winning entries was in verse.

What other attraction holds forth as much real interest and pleasure as a well ordered home? The greatest thing in life. The cheerfulness and rosy glow of the hearth fire and the illumination of the floor and bridge lamps express the spirit of a cozy living room.

Comfort appears in the overstuffed chair, the plush rug with its luxuriant soft arms and back, the footstool to match, and the mahogany occasional table, essential in a living room where convenience is considered.

The five piece bedroom suite, one of individual charm, modeled after the style of Louis XVI, consists of a bed, vanity dresser and bench, chair, forobe, night stand and rocker. The finish is in French gray with a decorative motif in rose.

The handsome windows showed art in their arrangement. They were not too crowded as is often the case in such an exhibit. The ladies' figures were well placed to bring out an artistic effect; while filmy materials were well draped to show daintiness of color and weave.

The fall showing of millinery was daintily arranged to display variety of headgear as endorsed by Dame Fashion.

The coloring was especially well chosen in the millinery display window, where autumn leaves prevailed.

In the selection of the materials to be exhibited, rare judgment was used by the window artists to choose only the latest creations in gowns, hats, footwear and filmy materials.

The south window has a large variety of Stetson and Malloy brands of velour hats, in the colors which are to be in vogue this fall.

Barrows Furniture windows presented a most interesting view of a background of pictures, silken draperies, a window dressed in Scranton lace and Orinoco tapestry.

CHARLIE WHITE WINS FIGHT TO RID SYSTEM OF WHITE PLAGUE

Is boxing a body builder and health restorer? This question has been asked thousands of times both by persons in favor of boxing and those opposed to the fight game.

In the following article written by Charlie White: The White Ward at Denver, the fans got an inside peep at White's early career and gather few facts on boxing.

White and Billy Alger meet at El Paso tonight. The following is taken from the Denver Express: I am here to box Bobby Ward at the Stockyard, Friday night.

MAUDE TRUAX MAKES HIT IN CONVINCING OFFERING AT ELKS

Although there are 11 parts in "Mile-a-Minute Kendall," the three-act comedy with which the Bainbridge-Karns Stock company opened the week at the Elks theater last night, Maude Truax, playing "Amelia," the pessimistic housekeeper who is never happy unless she is perfectly miserable, is just about the best three-quarters of the show.

The play was her own, and Sherman Bainbridge as the miserly Jim Evans, gave the two principals a fine background. Lloyd Corrigan as Judge Weeks added many a ray of sunshine to Amelia's cloudy world.
