

ARMS PARLEY TO SUCCEED BEYOND FONDEST HOPES, PRESIDENT SAYS

(Republican A. P. Leased Wire)
 WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Decided optimism on results of the arms conference was expressed by President Harding yesterday in two brief addresses, one to a delegation of farmers and the other at the annual meeting of the American Red Cross.

Speaking to a delegation from the national board of farm organizations, the National Farmers' union and affiliated organizations, the president said: "This conference will demonstrate the wisdom of internationally coming together to solve the problems facing each other and settling problems without resort to arms."

Later Mr. Harding, in convening the Red Cross meeting, declared: "We are going to succeed beyond our fondest hopes; it is getting to be pleasing to be able to say that things ever done before we can do now."

"I know whereof I speak," he declared. The president said at the Red Cross meeting: "I am just as proud of what the American Red Cross does as though were an intimate and active participant in all its programs. It is one of the finest manifestations of the better side of America that has ever been shown. I hope with all my heart that much of the big work which has been yours in the past will never be asked of you again. It will be a wonderful thing for me and you to have lived in a period when we have brought the conscience of mankind into an understanding where we shall have done something possible to prevent calling on you again for war service."

"And I like to say it to you, because I know whereof I speak. We are going to succeed beyond our fondest hopes; it is getting to be so pleasing to be able to say that things never done before we can do now. There isn't anything impossible when the conscience of present day civilization is fixed on that accomplishment."

Praises American Leadership
 "And quite apart from our contribution to this new consciousness in the world, quite apart from the immediate benefits and satisfactions which come to us, what a wonderful thing it is to have lived in thought and acted in such a way as to bring the deliberate intelligent public opinion to this conclusion. I am so proud of America because I have been the witness to the radiation of American conscience and American public sentiment to the farthest parts of the world."

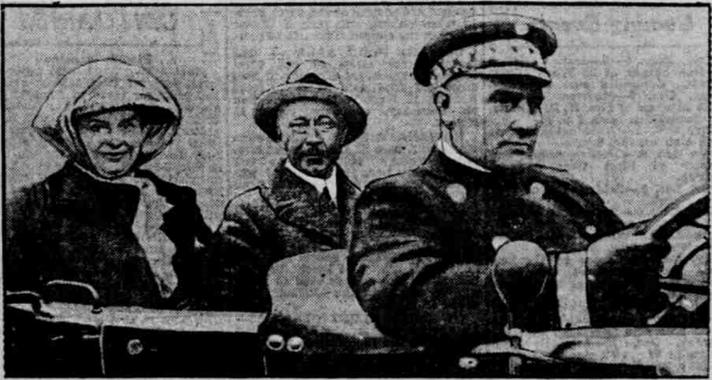

"You haven't any idea the influence which the state of mind of this people has had on the other nations. This very crucial and important moment. And it is so fine to know that the rest of mankind accepts the attitude of this great, powerful nation, each able to go on in a competition of arms, much stronger to assert its demands through physical might than anybody in the world, and yet notwithstanding that more fortunate position of physical might and financial strength, here in America, asking nothing of anybody except to join us in the accomplishment of a thing which God would wish and for which humanity must rejoice. I have found many a satisfaction in the knowledge of the under things and sympathetic things and helpful things and Christ-like things which you have done, it is a pleasure to say I hope your sympathies and your humanities and your gentler and sympathetic ministrations and your generosity shall all be largely be applied to those inevitable sufferings and those inevitable sufferings which come now and then in the peaceful course of human affairs. There will never be time when there is not a work to be done. But how much more comforting is going to be to have the consciousness that you are contributing to the alleviation of the inescapable sufferings of peace rather than to be piled upon in the greater way as an agency to relieve the sufferings deliberately caused by war."

Attack Validity Of Act Creating Rail Labor Board

(Republican A. P. Leased Wire)
 WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Validity sections of the transportation act providing for establishment of the railroad labor board were attacked in a supreme court yesterday by counsel for Texas in presenting argument the second of the great rate cases. The Texas suit, which primarily seeks to have the court determine the power of the interstate commerce commission to regulate intrastate freight schedules and passenger rates, was called as soon as argument was completed in a similar case from Wisconsin. T. L. Beauchamp, of counsel for Texas, said that state assailed also the commission's assumption of authority to regulate railroad construction, to order abandonment of the lines, or to supervise financing of lines incorporated by the state and to which the state had donated tracts of land. Concluding argument in the Wisconsin case, H. Bollbrich, counsel for that state, declared the government had fixed interstate rates solely to reduce the return which the railroads were declared by congress to be entitled to on their investments regardless of disparity between interstate and intrastate rates. The Stars and Stripes was unveiled as the flag of the United States America June 14, 1777.

DEMOCRATIC SENATOR ASSAILS SPEECH OF HARDING AS PARTISAN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The Republican party's leadership was assailed in a speech in the senate yesterday by Senator Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, who declared President Harding was doing "the very things for which he as a senator had denounced President Wilson." The president's message, he added, constituted an appeal to partisanship and warning to Republicans to disavow their allegiance to "bloody organization." Mr. Harrison attacked the senate Republican leaders, saying they had "shifted and hopped until none of us knew where or when or why." Secretary Mellon also was denounced as seeking in his annual report, to "help along" the ideas of President Harding with respect of "relieving the rich of heavy taxation." When Mr. Wilson opposed or urged legislation, Mr. Harrison continued, the then Senator Harding declared him as a "dictator and an autocrat," and when Mr. Wilson issued his appeal in 1918 for the election of a Democratic congress, Mr. Harding was equally bitter in his denouncement. "Yet we have the spectacle," he said, "of the president making a speech against the soldier bonus, a thing unprecedented. Then yesterday he appealed to the agricultural group to line up to get behind the party banner." He said he was confident there had been a misprint in the president's message, where Mr. Harding had expressed appreciation of the "signal achievements" of the extra session. What the president meant, he added, probably was "single achievement."

A letter, written by King Charles I to his father, James I, when he was a 10-year-old boy, has been discovered in an old house in Edinburgh. The christ museum of Parliament House paid $50,000 for the letter.

This Sale Is So Unlike the Common Run of Sales

This sale is so unlike the common run of clearance sales where one finds only picked-over-and-left-behind styles. In every case the styles are those that are in the very spot light of fashion. This is evident in the beautiful dresses of canton crepe, charmeuse, tricotine, Poiret twill, twillcord, etc.

These fine materials are developed in a variety of styles that is amazing. Dresses with flowing sleeves, beautiful and intricate designs of rich embroideries and braids, gorgeous array, showing fine workmanship, in models for every day time occasion where a dress is required, are to be found in this event at greatly reduced prices.

NOTHING LIKE IT!
 Altogether it is such a collection of new styles as one would expect to see at the grand opening of a fashion show, and never in a clearance sale. But the good part of it is that they ARE in a clearance sale—and one in which the greatly reduced prices mean more than usual because the fine styles were marked closer in the first place than before.
