In the pulpit treatment of texts there is such thing as homfletic vivisection, in which the very life of the sacred words ts killed out by artificial plans and ex-cessive divisions. We so busy ourselves with the "skeleten" of the sermon that the soul of the text escapes us, and it, too, becomes a skeleton in our hands. The first pair of socks ever worn by Lord Byron has just been persented to the Players' club of New York. They are queer looking little things, and seem to be made of narrow braid sewn together. One can learn nothing of Byron's deformity from them, for they were cut down to fit a doll before they came into the hands of their last owner. A novelty in the way of commencement exercises was seen at a New York grammar school. After the singing and recitations the girls made strawberry short cake and poached eggs in the presence of their guests and distributed them among their friends. One of the trustees said in a speech that the time would come when, if any one wanted a cook, he would come straight to the school and get one. A Notorious English Swell. The notorious English swell who bears the courtesy title of Lord Courtenay has filed his noble shovel again. Debts, five thousand eight hundred and fifty pounds rterling, and assets, nil. Tradesmen have endured much at Courtenay's hands, for In 1870 he paid a shilling in the pound on one hundred thousand pounds sterling, and eight years later he parted another "bob" dividend on twenty thousand pounds sterling. In the palmy days of his credit (he never had any money) this scion of an ancient race belonged to the Marquis of Hastings' "plunging" set and his betting liabilities ran into tens of thousands before the ring refused to do any more business with him, except for cash down. Even when Courtenay's name was listed on the turf, a valet would attend him to race meetings with & change of light kid gloves. Lavender and lemon were the fashionable tints in those days. On the appearance of the valet, his noble master would change gloves, carelessly flinging the scarcely pint soiled gloves away. After the first great amash, Courtenay came down to one pair of gloves per day, the second brought him to one pair a week, and now be is

The French lottery loan for the Pavama canal is likely, it is now said, to prove a failure: It would be a matter for surprise should the event be otherwise. The very fact of resort being had to such a scheme in the eyes of all sober capitalists. When a company appeals to the gamb-ling mania so far as to promise prizes, varying in amount from 100,000 to 500,000 francs, it is pretty clear that their enterprise cannot stand on its own merits. In the case in question a French financial writer predicts that not more than onehalf, possibly not more than one-fourth, of the amount required will be subscribed. It is thought that a large part of the sum thus raised will have to be deposited with the government as sccurity for the successful prize drawers. - Toronto Week.
