Navigation of the Yadkin.

H. C. Jones, Esq. of Salisbury, has published in the Salisbury Watchman an interesting letter addressed to Col. Walter Gwynn, on the navigation of the upper Yadkin River. He, in company with others, descended in a boat from Rockford, in Surry county, to where the track of the Central Railroad crosses the river, the purpose of giving the river a cursory reconnoisance, with a view to determining its capacity for slack water navigation. He thinks that it might be made navigable, but defers to Col. Gwynn's opinion on the subject, which he asks for the benefit of the public. Col. G.'s experience and knowledge of the subject will cause his opinion to be looked for with a great deal of interest.

The above sage "reflection" is made by the Argus of Tuesday last, by way of winding up an article on "strict construction." The democrats being strict constructionists, are, by the logic of the Argus, destitute of sense. Well, that is a bad plight to be in. But when we reflect that such men as John C. Calhoun and Levi Woodbury and Silas Wright, not to mention such living statesmen as Cass, and Douglas, and Hunter, are in the category of strict constructionists, we are consoled and are even led to believe that "reflections" upon a party containing many of the greatest and wisest men of the present generation, are very often made without much "reflection."

Now as there is very often two versions to a story, let me tell you what I have heard in conversation with two gentlemen from Anson county only yesterday, one a whig the other a democrat. Both agreed as to the fact that the General would not take in Anson-that a number of prominent whigs would not vote for him, naming one in particular who I know to be a whig from the days of John Q. Gen. Dockery at Wilmington.

The whig candidate for Governor addressed the people of Wilmington on Monday the 1st inst., and was replied to by Col. S. J. Person. We do not propose to give a synopsis of the discussion, but merely to present our readers with a brief portion of it as we find it reported in the Wilmington Journal:

"General Dockery rose to reply, and stated THE NEW FLOUR WAREHOUSE is now nearly that Mr. Person's arguments were all stale and completed. We have rarely heard of such indecorous conduct as that of which Gen. Dockery was guilty in Wilmington. It is useless for the General to try to dodge this great issue. He must come out plainly and let the people know his position. If he does not squarely take ground in favor of the bill he cannot get even his own party vote. He is, however, following the lead of the Whig State Convention, which, instead of backing up Messrs Badger and Kerr on this question, and thus lending aid to a tangible measure of justice to the South, passed a resolution in favor of an abstraction! To the Delegates of Cedar Creek District: GENTLEMEN-At a meeting held by the demoas suitable persons to represent the county of Cumberland in the House of Commons. I am flattered by this mark of their preference, but must decline becoming a candidate or allowing my name to go before the Convention. My and my past action with the democratic party of Cumberland has been without reference to a seat in the Legislature or ulterior purposes to subserve. I shall most cheerfully support the nominees of the Convention, believing that oppopular will.

This declaration arises from no disappointed or embittered feeling, but the desire rather to remove every obstacle in the way of that harmonious action which I hope will characterize the proceedings of the Convention, and be the precursor of certain victory. With many thanks to the democracy of your

Diseases of the Liver. When the celebrated Dr Rush declared that drunkenness was a disease, he enunciated a truth which the experience and observation of medical men is every day confirming. The many apparently insane excesses of those who indulge in the use of spirituous liquors, may be thus accounted for. The true cause of conduct, which is taken for infatuation, is very frequently a diseased state of the Liver. No organ in the human system, when deranged, produces a more frightful catalogue of diseases. And if, instead of applying remedies to the manifestations of disease, as is too often the case, physicians would prescribe with a view to the original cause, fewer deaths would result from diseases induced by a deranged state of the Liver. Three-fourths of the diseases enumerated under the head of Consumption, have their seat in a diseased Liver. (See Dr Gunn's great works.)
