[From the Los Angeles Express.] FLEETING PLEASURES.

Oddestretch upon a bed of pain,
A wasting old man lay,
He knew that he would ne'er again Mix with the blithe and gay.

While measuring back his fleeting span Of life, now ebbing fast, The fatal music of a band With May-Day revelers passed.

The strains he heard, the shouts of joy From Pleasure's passing train—In memory, swift, he was a child, A youth, a man again.

He gambled on the village green;
He stole the measured dance;
He felt the first love's glowing hand,
The thrill of her soft glance.

Again he heard the bugle-call—Charged in the armed rank—Drove back the foe, and saw him fall Along the front and flank.

Hark! there's a well-remembered strain Makes gleam his glazing eye, He heard it once before, when he Came home from victory!

The sounds pass on, and all is still—Still as the Sabbath day—
The flush, the gleam, the sudden thrill, As quickly pass away.

Then comes a moan—a low, faint moan—A choked suppressed sigh;
And well the watchers guess what meant The tears that fill his eye.

No more, they mean, will he again Mix with the blithe throng—No more rise from that bed of pain, And join in rout and song.

So, as the ages fly again, Those who are gay to-day,
To-morrow on a bed of pain Will pass, like him, away.

JAMES J. AYERS.

LOS ANGELES, May 3, 1874.

A Saloon-Keeper who Enjoys the Woman's Crusade.

McARTHUR, G. April 5, 1874.

Editor Commercial.

I have been keeping a saloon and selling liquors in this town for the last eight years. At this time I am the only man selling liquors in this town except what is sold at the drug stores, and the drug stores are selling under a contract or an agreement made with the Ladies' Temperance League.

There were three other saloons in this place, but they were closed out by the Ladies' League. During the past sixty-six days the ladies have made daily calls upon me; part of the time have held prayer-meetings in my saloon; and part of the time they held their meetings on the pavement, in front of my place of business. Often the singing and praying would be continued until a late hour in the night. For the past ten days they have kept sentinels in front of my saloon from about 7 o'clock in the morning until 12 o'clock at night. During all of this time I have almost had hourly conversation with the ladies, and in all of the meetings and in the conversations no fighting language has ever passed between us, except in one single instance, and I will say that in this case I was to blame, and promised to do better in all time to come. We have often talked together upon the use and sale of whisky, expressing our opinions freely, though differing in our opinions. The discussions have always ended in good feeling on my part, and I think in good feeling on the part of the ladies.

In all the eight years I have been engaged in the business, I have never had better times, or enjoyed myself better than during the past few weeks. In fact, I am doing a more profitable business than ever before. I sell nothing to be drunk on the premises; house orderly, and surrounded by pleasant and smiling ladies. I never enjoyed better society, or half so much of it, before. The singing is good. I love good music. Praying my mother taught me to do in early life. There is one elderly lady in town who is truly gifted in prayer; and I must say that did the State of Ohio, or offer a premium for the best prayer, I am sure this lady in McArthur, would "carry off the palm." I would not like to have the ladies discontinue their visits to my place of business. Come, come, ever!—some of you at least. I am a widower of thirty-five years and some of the ladies are not married. Some young widows have been calling, and I have been silly told that I am good looking.
I don't like to talk much about myself, but did any one ever see a widower that would object to being called good looking by a pretty unmarried lady? I am sure of my callers are good looking, and I think they would make good wives. Now, who can tell where or how this thing will end? PATRICK O'KEEFE.

Sound.

Speaking of the Texas and Pacific Railroad, the Fond du Lac Commonwealth says: "The building of this road is of immense importance to the development of Texas, and the whole country through which it passes, and there can be no doubt that the very slight aid asked of the general government should be granted.
Any unprejudiced person would admit that there is no sign of a "steal" in the bill, and there can be no good reason for refusing to guarantee the interest under the most ample security which is offered to protect the government from loss. There can be no repetition of the Union Pacific fraud in this case."

A Pittsburg lawyer and doctor who have rooms in the same building, frequently indulge in a game of euchre in the evening.
The other Sunday the disciple of Blackstone stuck his head within the M. D.'s door and said, "Doc, come in and have a game of euchre." The other replied, "I never played euchre on Sunday yet, and I'll be—if I ever will."
The lawyer was sorry he had hurt the doctor's feelings, so he said, apologetically, "I'm sorry, Doc, but what do you say to seven up?" The other felt mollified, and followed his friend, saying, "I don't care if I do take a hand at auction pitch."

A FLOATING ISLAND.—A pond in Lonsdale, R. I., has a floating island, like those found in Georgia lakes. It is a quarter of an acre in extent, and to put it nautically, draws six feet of water. It has been accumulating for twenty years, and its soil is so solid that it maintains a thick growth of trees twenty-five feet high.
Picnics are held on this island, and romantic lovers go there. The wind blows it from point to point in the pond, sometimes moving in with considerable velocity. In the neighborhood it is the subject of many superstitions, one of them being that sweethearts who vow fidelity upon it will never be faithless.

TERRIBLE TELEGRAPH OPERA-TORS.—A widow lady who started a boarding house for telegraph operators in this city lately, found herself, at the end of the month, bankrupt in purse, and minus her two daughters. Her guests had disappeared also, leaving behind them an old Saratoga trunk, containing two bars of pig lead, a dozen tomato cans and a badly worn Bible. On the fly-leaf of the book were several quotations from the Latin poets, such as "Three of a kind beat two pair." "Play the ace to win," "Copper on the deuce," "Take it sweet with a little lemon," etc. — Brooklyn Argus.

A North Carolina editor thus writes: "With wearied brain and fatigued limbs from the duties of the day, as we bend over a manuscript, the soft and soothing strains of music, such as only Johnson's hand can make, falls upon our ears, and the revivifying influence is as though some magic wand had passed over us." Poor fellow.

At Wabash, Indiana, the other day, a city Councilman traded an artesian well, 1,200 feet deep, for a steam fire engine. The trade was declared off, however, when the agent demanded that the well should be delivered on board the cars boxed for shipment.

Mrs. William Wirt Sikes writes from Paris that the younger Lumas is tall and handsome, with a speaking blue eye, a courtly manner, and a smile that would rain the heart of a tobaccoist's Lujun.

Millwaukee thought she had a case wherein a young girl died of a broken heart, but it turned out that her corset-strings were too tight, and one stroke of a jackknife revived her.

A Vienna journal recently contained an advertisement offering the services of "Anna Agrikol," sick nurse, watches dead bodies, repairs straw chairs, applies leeches, and makes pastry, desserts and delicacies."

Alderman Mullaly, of the St.
Louis Council, refers with patri-tude to the fact that he has been a member of that body for two years, and has escaped without getting a black eye.

To cure a bachelor's aches—silk, with a woman in it.
