LOVE'S REVEAL.

Love in a lethargy once slept
A week without waking;
And day and night his mother wept As if her heart were breaking.
The Graces pinched the boy in vain;
He never felt their stinging;
They sang to him a Paphian strain;
He slept through all their singing.

To Jove at length the goddess soared, Most miserably crying,
"Oh, save my son, Heaven's mighty Lord!
The God of Love is dying!"
"To earth," said Jove, "comes more repair, And cease your cries and weeping;
A friendly leech will meet you there Who'll cure Love's oversleeping."

Venus flew back; the boy was free, For Jove on special mission, Had sent him green-eyed Jealousy, Jove's own state physician;
The cure much worse than the disease—Olympus shook with laughter—For Love was never at his ease, And never slumbered after.

A PRINTER IN DISTRESS.

[From the Carson Appeal of the 11th inst.] Yesterday, Mr. Longabaugh, well known in this county, came to this office with a letter from a man who signs his name Francis X. O'Brien, and who represents himself as a nephew of the late James B. McQuillan, a well known printer and journalist. Mr. O'Brien represents himself as one of the typographic craft and as being in great stress from sickness and want of funds. Mr. Longabaugh's story concerning the unfortunate man is that he was discovered in the mountains somewhere near Monitor, in Alpine county, California, some days since, lost, and well nigh dead from cold. He was taken care of by the persons who found him (sheep herders, we believe) and is now at or near Monitor, destitute and in a most distressing plight. Mr. Longabaugh says O'Brien's feet are terribly frozen, and he deems it impossible that the right one can be saved, but that it will have to be amputated. Not only to the typographical fraternity, but to everybody, this unfortunate man is an object of charity, and we shall take pains to facilitate the promotion of any scheme which promises him the most speedy and effective relief. We need hardly ask the California and Nevada press to report this story for the good it will do in the way of relief.

SATURDAY NIGHT.—Saturday night makes people human, and sets their hearts to beating softly, as they used to do before the world turned them into wardrums and jarred them to pieces with tattoos. The iron-doored vaults come to with a bang, up go the shutters with a will, click goes the key in the lock. It is Saturday night, and business breathes free again. Homeward, ho! The door that has been ajar all the week gently closes behind him; the world is all shut out. Shut out?
Shut in, rather. Here are his treasures, after all, and not in the vault and not in the book—save the record in the old family Bible—and not in the bank.
Maybe you are a bachelor, frosty and forty. Then, poor fellow, Saturday night is nothing to you, just as you are nothing to anybody. Get a wife, blue-eyed or black-eyed, but above all, trueeyed. Get a little home, no matter how little; a sofa just two and a half, and then get two or two and a half in it of a Saturday night, and then read this paragraph by the light of your wife's eyes, and thank God, and take care.

TRAIN-BOY AND PASSENGER.—A train boy on the Illinois road found a rather tough customer in an old gentleman of composed mien, who received all shots as though he were bullet-proof.
The boy bombarded him with papers, and pamphlets, and candles, and bound books, and nuts, and fruits of one kind and another. But it was no good. Had the elderly party been lined inside with brass he could not have shown greater indifference. The boy fretted under his treatment, as was plain to be seen. He had passed the cigars some thirty times, and without success, when he said, in a tone of desperation:

"Try some of these cigars, and if they don't kill you within a month I'll give you your money back."
The man was somewhat amused by that, but he had the boy. He said:
"If I am dead, how can you give me the money?"
"I'll give it to your family, then."
"But I ain't no family."
"Well, I'll give it to the family next door," persisted the boy.
"But there ain't no family next door," said the man, with a smile lengthening his face.
"Oh! there'll be one move in when they hear you are dead," was the quick reply.

The elderly passenger shut up like a borrowed knife.

LADY ANNA GORE-LANTON, sister of the Duke of Buckingham, Governor of Madras, said the other day that men in India were to a great extent ruled by the women, who were very conservative and had a great objection to any improvement in their customs.
The lower-class women worked very hard, pulling stone rollers, cutting grass, and in helping their husbands in bricklaying. The natives treated widows very badly; their clothes and jewels were taken away from them, and they were made as miserable as possible.

In most Connecticut towns the little roust molasses jug is still kept on the upper shelf of the cupboard, and it makes a church-going man sad to blow out the candle, just before going to bed, and forget to take a long draw of molasses from the jug. But it is sadly pleasant, even in the darkness, to hear the familiar gurgling of jug-a-rum, jug-a-rum.

Demorest's Monthly: Word comes to us from Paris of a recent contrivance of the modistes, by which the long trains and colored dresses are to be retained in position. A strong elastic is attached to one garter, just above the knee, carried over and fastened to the other; thus the length of the step taken by the wearer is regular and the classic folds of the costume remain undisturbed.
