He found about 200 burners, thoroughly armed, who announced their determination that they would allow no coal to be loaded without orders from the President of their Association. A notice to the effect that the Eureka Consolidated was paying 30 cents was received while the Sheriff was there, and no further opposition will be encountered to their being supplied. The Sheriff returned to town upon being assured that the parties wanted would put in their appearance to-day.

This Evening's Concert. The Sherwin-Porteons concert will take place in the Court-house this evening. Miss Sherwin comes endorsed in terms of unqualified praise by the press of this and neighboring States, and she is said to almost unnecessary to speak, as she has only returned to her former home, and the scene of her former triumphs. The ladies will be assisted by a strong company, and the programme, which will be found elsewhere, is an attractive one. A full house should, and doubtless will, greet them.

Eureka Con. Mr. Donnelly reports operations for the

The furnaces are running well, producing The furnaces are running well, producing about 30 tons of bullion daily. Have been overhauling air compressors and machinery at the mine, and have everything in good shape for handling what water is now com-ing in. The force of water coming in through the 12th level drift is constantly diminishing, so there will be no further that deep, but would be no drawback to trouble at present of keeping the several diffs free from water. They are rather nice looking pictures, about eight feet square, showing, among other things, the manner in which the ore deposits are formed, their location with respect to the surrounding seats. the ore deposits are formed, their location with respect to the surrounding rocks, and many other interesting geological peculiarities. The views are generally sectional, illustrating an ore body cut in halves, with the over and underlying porphyry, limestone or slate. Every peculiarity of vein or deposit is thus represented on canvas. All the illustrations are taken from the mining explorations of California and Nevada. They are executed with remarkable clearness. The Lewis District.

The San Francisco "Stock Report" says: A region which is just now attracting considerable attention on account of its promising appearance, is the Lewis Mining District, situated in Lander county, Nevada, 11 miles south of Battle Mountain. The District is extensive, very mountainous and the croppings are bold and easily traced. The veins are of chloride on the sorface, but change to sulphurers at the water-level. The water-level ranges from 10 to 80 feet below the surface. The coun-try rock is porphyritic granite. The loca-tions in the District number at least 10%. Only two Companies have been incorpo-rated—the Eagle Silver Mill and Mining Company and the Betty O'Neil Mining Company. The oldest mine in the Dis-trict is owned by A. M. Starr and the Messrs. Grove, of San Francisco. These gentlemen have worked their mine contin-nously for four years, but have been satis-Leal to take their profits and not incorporate. The property has paid from the start. The last report made to the San Francisco office says: There is no change as yet in the south drift, still in low grade ore. In the lower level we have in the crosscut a change in the formation. A spar scam has made its appearance, dipping to the southwest, at the same angle as the one in the cave above the level of the Richmond. I am pushing all of the work that is possible at this point. I think we are in the ore body that is coming to-ward us from the fifth and sixth levels. There is no change in the Uncle Sam drift.

The Idaho "World" says: "One of our Nevada exchanges published a letter, a few days ago, stating that the snow is forty or fifty feet deep in the mountains of the Yankee Fork district.
