were presented in a skillful and artistic manner. There is only one step from the sublime to the ridiculous, and only one from laughter to tears. This was demon-strated last evening, for while there was strated last evening, for while there was merriment one moment, in the next there was a touch of nature, so consummately arranged, that gave us a view of inner life, something that appeals to the better part of one's nature. The first act, however, is too novel-like and explanatory, and falls a little heavy. But the succeeding ones work out the plot by admirable action. Mr. Lingard was not over successful with his part. Finished as he was in his performance, his interview with his brother in the last act was devoid of feeling, though it should have been a scene of intense emotion. But gold, diamonds and emerally acceptable and the second of the se it should have been a scene of intense emotion. But gold, diamonds and emeralds cannot be expected from one mine.

Mrs. Lingard was resplendant in form and action, and played with the girlish grace of an artiste. Her rich, deep voice, with its peculiar accent, has a decided charm in its clear enunciation. Mrs. Lingard is noted for her genius and taste in dressing, and gave her audience an illustration last evening that she fully understood the art. However, any kind of drapery would look becoming on such a form. The cast throughout was a strong one. Messrs. Overton, Wilson and Maubery, particularly the latter, did some excellent acting, or, rather, natural playing. Mr. Westford also made an acceptable appearance. Miss Cliefden again proved a strong card in the play. Whether in the sentimental or pathetic scenes, she was equal to the occasion, and rendered the situations strong and absorbingly interesting. made in the District Court over the above word. In his opening statement Mr. Wren word. In his opening statement Mr. Wren used it in connection with the formation of Prospect Mountain, holding that as Ruby Hill is a mere offshoot of that mountain, it might be equally applicable to the last named locality. Senator Stewart assumed that it was the "anticlinal" theory of the Richmond that frightened everybody else from Ruby Hill. RICHMOND vs. ALBION.

Second Day of the Great Injunction Trial.

CONCLUSION OF PLAINTIFF'S TESTIMONY. .

Opening Statement of Senator

Stewart. Introduction of Evidence for the Albion.

The District Court convened at 10 A. M. yesterday, Judge Rising presiding. The same throng of interested spectators were present. The first thing in order was the introduction of further documentary evidence, such as deeds, patents, etc., by plaintiff. Mr. Wren was sworn and took the stand He testified to having located the St. David in his own name, as President of the Richmond Company of Nevada; that he had subsequently executed a deed in due form of the property to said company, but that the instrument had been mislaid in his office, and after diligent search he had been unable to find it. Counsel for the Albion objected to this kind of testimony, and after considerable discussion the matter went over to allow further search to be

Joseph Potts was the next witness put upon the stand. His testimony was in effect that he had posted the St. David notice while foreman of the Richmond mine; that the point of location was in shale; that he did $200 worth of work for two successive years on the St. David location; that he never saw any ledge, or ore, or mineral on the claim.

Thomas Brown was called to identify the location of the Poorman. He had resided in the district since 1869. Knew the Poorman claim and had read the notice posted thereon. On cross examination a Poorman claim and had read the notice posted thereon. On cross examination a copy of the same notice was placed in his hands which he was totally unable to read. Messrs. Wescoatt and Rickard were recalled and asked a few additional questions. The former testified to the work on the Poorman, and the latter to ore from the same claim which he was having assayed.

works on mining, from a scientific stand point, were offered in testimony, to which his Honor replied that counsel might quote at pleasure from standard authorities. Plaintiffs case here rested. THE DEFENSE. Senator Stewart made the opening state-

Senator Stewart made the opening statement for the defense. It was an able and telling presentation of the facts from his side of the case. He was sometimes factious, at Mr. Wren's expense, at others eloquent and always forcible. The big lode theory received his hearty approval; it was the only sensible theory that could be applied to Ruby Hill for the guidance of practical men and to protect the rights of miners; he cared not how the ore was formed; it was enough to know that it is of miners; he cared not how the ore was formed; it was enough to know that it is there; we must deal with practical ques-tions as practical men for practical pur-poses; courts are instituted and maintained for this purpose; the lode is clearly de-fined with regular walls, both foot and hanging; every notice, patent and paper filed in evidence by the Richmond, and every drift and tunnel and excavation, all operations and explorations by said com-pany within these walls, were silent but passed through that city the evening previous, on the overland express passing West.

The photographs of Mrs. Lingard in the show windows about town are exquisite works of the studio, and command general admiration. Woods, the usher, has smaller likenesses for sale, equally as good. Price for cabinet, 50 cents; double size, $1 25.

Comedy Drama.

The Lingards played to what may be termed a light house last night, though the piece put on the boards was infinitely superior to the one presented the evening previous. It was not as full of broad command in the previous of the studios, and these were presented in a skillful and states of the United San Campan and expiorations by said company within these walls, were silent but potent witnesses to the existence of one great lode on Ruby Hill. He would show that the Virginia claim was not located and bounded as claimed by the plaintiff; that the effort to stretch it out over the disputed territory was an after thought for the purposes of this action; that the Poorman was located on the Tip Top patent; that the work on the Poorman had been performed for years within the patented lines of the Tip Top, and this too before the Richmond had acquired the Poorman title, such as it was; that the Virginia title, even if it conflicted with the rights of defendant, had at one time passed into the hands of an alien foreign corporation, which could not hold mineral land under the law as it then stood; that the rights of the Uncle Sam claim, now the property of the defendant, had intervened. the rights of the Uncle Sam claim, now the property of the defendant, had intervened; that the St. David was located on the shale that the St. David was located on the shale outside of the lode, and amounted to no location at all; that the St. George patent was false and fraudulent and wholly void; that the Land Department had erroneously assumed jurisdiction and issued the patent while an adverse claim (the Uncle Sam) was still pending settlement in the Courts, and finally, that the defendant should rely upon the Uncle Sam title, which, being on the limestone, and therefore on the lode, was good as against the world to that portion of the great lode west of the Tip Top westerly end line. When Senator Stewart had finished the Court recessed until 2 o'clock.

Thos. J. Read, Surveyor and Mining Engineer, was the first witness put upon the stand for the defense. Mr. Read proved the stand for the defense. Mr. Read proved to be a remarkably clear and able witness. He was perfectly familiar with all the mines on Ruby Hill, and described the various workings in a most intelligent manner. He regarded the limestone zone on Ruby Hill as one great lode, with well defined walls—the ore occurring at irregular intervals and in irregular bodies promiscuously through the limestone; the lode varies in width from almost nothing up to 700 or 800 feet; all of the companies on Ruby Hill stop their drifts when they reach the shale on one side and the quartzite on the other; in one place in the on Ruby Hill stop their drifts when they reach the shale on one side and the quartzite on the other; in one place in the K K the ore had extended from wall to wall; had surveyed for parallel claims on the lode on Ruby Hill because the owners directed him to do so; the Phenix claim covers the whole lode; in approaching an ore body on Ruby Hill the limestone usually gets soft and will assay from a trace up to rich ore; estimated that the Richmond Company had taken not less than $500,000 from the ground in controversy; it is the custon of the miners of this district to locate their claims but 200 feet in width; explained the map and pointed out one place where it is 1,760 feet between the shale and quartzite on the surface.

wm. Arrington, sworn. Had been a superintendent of Ruby Hill mines for four years; familiar with that portion of the lode from the Richmond running south to the Jackson; considers it a well defined, true fissure vein, with perfect walls; thinks there are many ore connections from wall to wall, though such connections may be irregular; had not seen the hanging wall or shale continuously for any great distance, but knew it was found wherever drifts had reached out for it.

L. Davis was the next witness. Re-wherever drifts had reached out for it.

L. Davis was the next witness. Resides in Stockton, Utah; lived here in 1869; was one of the locators of the Tip Top; Thomas Mackinson was the other; helped to locate the Mayflower parallel with the Tip Top; the Virginia joined the eastend of the Mayflower and extended easterly; the Virginia was located parallel with the Richmond; the boundaries of all of these claims were marked with monuments; W. C. McCoy, Tim Halley, Dan Dalton and Judge Adams were present when the lines were established and the monuments erected; sunk a shaft 25 or 30 feet deep on the Mayflower, assisted by his partner, Thos. Mackinson; the work on the Iron shaft was done originally for the Richmond claim.

the Richmond claim.

Thos. Mackinson was called and corrob orated the testimony of Mr. Davis in every Important particular. Mr. Mackinson also resides at present in Utah, but was on Ruby Hill in 1869. At the conclusion of the examination of this witnesses the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

Sensible Advice to Those Conten plating a Change of Base to the Northward.

Bellevue, Idaho, March 27, 1881.

From the present outlook and by the daily arrival of men by stage and others on foot, packing their blankets, this country is going to have a large emigration from all parts of the country, by men of all pursuits and occupations the coming season.

There has been considerable information all pursuits and occupations the coming season.

There has been considerable information and correspondence sent from here this Winter which was purposely calculated to mislead people in regard to the condition of the country.

Now the actual condition is this: From a point 25 miles below Bellevue, all the way up the river, the snow is from eighteen inches to three feet deep everywhere in the valley, and of course in the hills proportionately deeper. By this you can form an idea how much longer we will have sleighing and snow-shoeing, and the Winter is not over by any means. Therefore I would suggest a few words of advice. To men hunting employment, stay where you are until the snow goes off and the mines start up and machinery and reduction works begin to arrive, or until you can get reliable information from here that you can get employment, for there are already plenty of idle men here and have been all Winter.

To prospectors: Don't think of coming here before the first of May. The grass will then be very short for your animals in the mountains. Hay you cannot get at any price, for there is none, besides prospecting on snow-shoes and under snow banks is up-hill work. This I know from experience last year, and this Winter is fully as heavy as the Winter of '79 and '80.

Don't forget to bring your outfits and a full supply of everything, as it is impossible to get some of the articles needed in prospecting here, and such as you can get you will have to pay a high price for.

To loafers, horse thieves, claim jumpers. and all disreputable characters, I would say that we have got a respectable and peaceable community, energetic and trusty officers of the law, that will do their duty and stand no foolishness.

Finally, to men intending to invest in mines, reduction works, or any other speculation, come one and all, and as soon as you can, for we can accommodate you with all kinds of property from a small-sized wildcat to a well-developed paying mine.

The stages are running regular and are making good time, excep

The stages are running regular and are making good time, excepting at the junction of the snow and bare ground, where the usual amount of mud and mire occurs.

The new town of Marshall, at the mouth The new fown of Marshall, at the mouth of Roy's Gulch (sometimes called "Yap," for short), is five miles above Bellevue on the river. It is at present all the rage; in fact real estate in Bellevue has already considerably depreciated, and it would require but very little for Bellevue to take a panic and pull up stakes for higher up the river.

The exhibition of pretty infants by proud mothers at the Opera House yesterday afternoon, says Sunday's Appeal, attracted a large number of visitors. There were sixteen babies entered for competition for sweetness of disposition, quantity of adipose tissue, complexion, etc. The judges were Mesdames Winner, Nevers and Hill, who awarded the following prizes: Fattest baby, Ernest J. It is very probable that the work of building the Nevada Southern railroad will be commenced this year. A road running through western Nye county would prove beneficial to mine owners and others in that section.

On Tuesday night a fire was discovered in the County Jail, but fortunately the officers succeeded in extinguishing it before much damage was done. Chinese carelessness was the cause of the fire.

Our Reasons.

In fact, we sell all goods at San Francisco prices, and NO HUMBUG. For the benefit of those who want to know how we sell Goods so cheap, we will explain: Our buyers are always in the market, and are thoroughly conversant with the Dry Goods business, being brought up to it from childhood, and therefore know the texture of any piece of Goods, and the actual value thereof, and being in the market all the time know when they see a piece of new goods, and no old stock that has been in the store for years can be palmed off on them as being of the latest pattern. And as we buy our goods for cash we get a certain percentage which those who do not cannot obtain. These are some of the reasons why we sell so cheap. Another reason is we sell for cash, thereby lessening our expenses. If we had to keep a set of books we would need more help. And again, we do not believe in the theory of charging good customers with the debts of others to make good their losses.

Sacques, Etc.

Examine our stock of Sacques, Cloaks, Dol-mans and Jackets, and compare them with those of other houses, and you will see that a saving of from Two to Fifteen Dollars on each garment can be made by making your pur-chases of us.

Fancy Goods. See our stock of Fancy Goods, in which we have a full and complete line of Ribbons, in Pale in Gros Grain, Satin-faced and Brocades, at very low prices.

Hosiery.

A full line of Hosiery in Ladies', Children's and Men's wear, which will require an inspection to be appreciated. Corsets.

Our line of corsets cannot be beaten even in San Francisco. See our DOLLAR CORSET. Also, take a look at our buttons, Fringes, Beaded Gimps, Cord, Tassels, etc.

Casus Belli" Is a very good word just now for some firms, but for us it is only our regular routine of sell-ing prices, which we are accustomed to.

Ladies will find it to their advantage to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere. We are selling goods cheaper than any other house in town, and we intend continuing to do so, whether it burts the feelings of any of our competitors or not. Our prices are marked in plain figures, so that all who read may run and know that we are strictly ONE PRICE.
