Fine Horses Stolen.

Hotel Arrivals.

William Kilgore had a fine span of mares at the Fair Play mine which he turned out to pasture in Newark Valley in the foothills of Oxyoke Summit, near to Dan High's ranch. They have not been seen since last Friday, when a Chinaman saw them near Oxyoke Springs. On Monday last Kilgore, needing the horses to hoist waste and ore out of the mine, went in search of them and discovered that they had been run off. Their tracks were found and traced by him in a direction leading to Fish Creek. There were also tracks of a third horse, which was no doubt ridden by the party who drove off Kilgore's. The mares are large dark bays, and are together worth about $400. At the time they were stolen only one of them was shod. Kilgore procured a horse and is now out in search of his mares. He is a man that is apt to follow the tracks until he finds them, and to make it hot for the thieves if he overtakes them. to pasture in Newark Valley in the foot-

Joy in the Williams Family. The wife of John N. Williams presented him yesterday morning with a big, fine him yesterday morning with a big, fine son. The father is delighted, of course. It is his first. He is full of pride over the event, and it will be some time before he can realize that there have been babies, and babies of the male sort, strapping and stout, before yesterday, and that households are likely to be blessed with them right along hereafter forever or until Gabriel blows his horn and says quit. There is nothing like it. We congratulate the delighted father and his worthy wife who, and the young Williams, we are glad to state, are doing as well as could be expected.

Firemen's Celebration. On the glorious Fourth, Richmond Hose Company No. 3 and the Hooks & Knicks will meet together at the hose house of the will meet together at the hose house of the latter company at noon, and there celebrate, as the firemen well know how to celebrate, the anniversary of our national independence. The Declaration will be read by Peter Breen, Eq.; Miss I. Sy Lewis will recite an appropriate pacin, and Alex. Wilson and A. L. Fitzge aid of the Hooks & Knicks, and M. Lowling of the Richmonds, will deliver short addresses, so Eureka will have some sort of a celebration anyway.

The matinee at the Opera House yesterday was very good. The Truckee Compa day was very good. The Truckee Company outdid themselves, and it was remarked by those who see them on the boards nightly that they have never acquitted themselves so well in Eureka before. The performance was spirited throughout, and the audience encouraged them by frequent applause. The proprieties were strictly observed, and nothing was said or done that could offend the most sensitive person.

School Trustees' Meeting. A meeting of the School Trustees of this township was held last night, at which it was determined to re-employ the present corps of teachers in the Public Schools of Last evening between 8 and 9 o'clock a corps of teachers in the Public Schools of Eureka. There will be one vacancy, caused by the absence of Mrs. Marsden, who leaves Eureka in a few days to take up her residence in California. It was decided to reopen the schools on the first Monday in September with a full corps of teachers. The schools have improved so much in the last six months that it was thought best to give them the best possible start when work is resumed, without any decrease of force. It may be found practicable, after the schools get well under way next Fall, to dispense with the fine-looking, handsomely dressed little boy about four years old, apparently a stranger in Eureka, got separated from his mother whom he had probably gone out with for a walk among the stores. He was found crying on the sidewalk, and a gentleman, who has a soft spot in his bosom for children, took him up and tried to console him. The little fellow was terribly frightened and threw his arms convulsively around the neck of his stranger friend, nor could anything for a time induce him to relax his hold. The gentleman packed him around in hopes of finding the child's mother. A lady came up and attempted to speak with him, but he only looked around for an instant and seeing that it was not his mamma he screamed at the top of his voice. While he was being carried around he thought he saw his mother in a dry goods store, and jumping down he ran towards her as fast as his little legs could carry him, but when he got near her he discovered that he was mistaken and he ran back to his protector's embrace again, the tears fairly streaming down his cheeks. In the course of an hour the little chap's mother, a lady from the southern country, who had been looking for her darling everywhere, reclaimed him and then there was joy. mother whom he had probably gone out der way next Fall, to dispense with the services of an assistant teacher in the services of an assistant teacher in the Grammar Department, but it is feared that to start with one teacher less than are employed at present might impair the efficiency of the schools, which have now got under such fine headway that anything like an experiment should not be attempted, except on the side of safety.

A pleasant and amusing little episode took place early last evening at Col. Perry's corner saloon, the occasion being the presentation to the Colonel by John E. Jones, on behalf of D. H. Birdsall, of a Jones, on behalf of D. H. Birdsall, of a dozen garrote collars, received by express from San Francisco. In the presence of a few mutual friends Mr. Jones did not make a few remarks, but put a box of pasteboard standups into the donee's capacious paws, who, when he saw how he had been garroted, gave way to the custom of the country, and everybody took a drink, after which Birdsall's true offering of 12 handsome garrotes were duly preof 12 handsome garrotes were duly pre-sented, and were received by the Colonel with his accustomed grace and in language of the truly classic kind.

and Mrs. Wendall and Miss Frank, closed yesterday afternoon for the term. The exercises passed off very creditably, and the children and teachers received many compliments from the large number of visitors who were present. A long, well-selected list of recitations, songs and instrumental selections was given in first-rate style. The pupils have advanced well, and in this the diligence and skill of the teachers are manifest.

HUGE VOLUMES.

Manufacture.
A representative of the Carson Appeal spent half an hour with H. H. Bancroft. author of the Histories of the Pacific Prize-Argenta hoisting works at Tuscarora Coast, and reports the following interview, which will give some idea of the progress of the work and the magnitude of the undertaking:

Reporter—What induced you first to undertake so great a work as publishing 39 volumes of history?

Bancroft—It was a matter of recreation mostly.

Reporter—Not a financial venture?

Bancroft—Hardly. I only expect to get a portion of my money back. I have spent $300,000 on the work, and I expect to spend $500,000. I had the means to do this, and concluded that it was better to invest the money in such a labor than on the turf, politics or travel. Of course, I will get some of this sum back from the sale of the work. I would like to get it all back, but certainly cannot expect to do this.

all back, but certainly cannot expect to do this.

Reporter—How many men have you employed?

Bancroft—My writers, compilers and translators now number 20. H. S. Oak and William Nemos are the best I have. Much of the labor is clerical. The history department is separate. I keep 20 compositors employed, and the work is never hurried. I get about 150 pages set up, and send it to Painter & Co. to be stereotyped. It takes about a ton of metal to stereotyped. It takes about a ton of metal to stereotype a volume. I aim to have the histories as correct as possible, and get every available scrap of information. For instance, I have finished the history of Central America, a volume of 800 pages. I hear that a similar history has been published in Spanish. I shall secure this work, and if it gives any new information I shall re-write my volume. I have plenty of time, and expect to continue my work as long as I live. I am in no hurry to get through, as the work is not a task in any sense. necessary to replace the building and

A BIG EROLITE.

A Large Visitant from the Realms of Space.
The Butte (Montana) Miner says: Joe

Summerfield and Mr. Weathersby, who returned yesterday from a fishing excursion to the Big Hole country, tell a story of the falling of an immense ærolite in the vicinity of Gibbons' battlefield, where they had taken shelter from the storm of Sunday afternoon. About 2 p. m. a loud crash was heard, not unlike thunder, and a shock as of an earthquake was felt, while the heavens were lit up with vivid flashes of lightning. Looking upward they beheld the clouds torn as Rescues' Ball—The Fourth.

It is a fixed fact now that there will be no other celebration of "The Great and Glorious Fourth" than the ball to be given by Rescue Hose Co. No. 1 in the evening.

As there will be no other opportunity for our citizens to display their patriotism, we suppose and hope most sincerely they will avail themselves of this anyhow. The boys are making all preparations for a grand time, and they will have it sure, as in time past they have never failed, and the success of the past is a guarantee of the future. We regret that the Olympic Club saw fit to give a dance Friday night, as it perhaps will somewhat militate against the boys in their effort—two dances following each other in such quick succession. It would have been a graceful act on the part of the club for them to have postponed their dance until after the Fourth, as the Rescues had advertised for that day, some weeks ago, and particularly so as we are informed the Rescues offered to pay the Club for the whole, or the greater part, of the expense which they had been at in preparing for their festivity. However, it is too late now to regret this, and we believe our citizens will not let the ball of the Hose Company suffer on that account. The price of tickets has been put by the boys at the modest sum of $3, and we again express the hope that every citizen will take one, as our fire company suffer on that account. He says: "It is to be hoped that the Board of Army Officers now employed in visiting the various colleges of the United States with a view of obtaining hints for the improvement of the West Point curriculum will discover that the instruction in poker given to the West Point cadets is miserably bad. There can be but one meaning attached to the recent charges of losing Government money at poker which have been brought against certain army officers. The men did not know how to play the game with any real efficiency. When called upon to play poker they lose their own money and then the money intrusted to them by the Government. The country has spent vast sums of money in establishing an institution for the education of officers for the army, and yet the graduates of this institution are beaten at poker by self-taught Indian agents, or by the graduates of Mississippi steamers. This is a thoroughly disgraceful state of things, and it must be remedied without delay."

Bilking the Devil.

Bilking the Devil.

Bad luck made a Boston man wish to die, but he was a firm believer in the Bible, and was aware of its mandate against suicide. He had heard it preached, too, that a death-bed repentance was sufficient to insure salvation. He made a careful study of this doctrine, consulted several clergymen (though without disclosing to them what he had in contemplation), and at length settled it in his own mind that the sinner who repented at the last moment was as sure of heaven as any one who had lived sanctified for years. Having settled that point to his own satisfaction he sought a means of suicide Having settled that point to his own satisfaction he sought a means of suicide which, while certain to kill, would leave him conscious long enough to make his peace with heaven. So he swallowed a deadly poison, and was taken to a hospital to die. "There he repented," says the narrator, "and he gave every indication that his contrition was sincere." that his contrition was sincer
