

BLAINE AND ALLISON. The San Francisco Call says: A Washington dispatch says there is abundant evidence of an understanding between Blaine and Allison by which the latter is bound not to oppose the former until such time as the former may indicate. In other words Allison will support Blaine as long as Blaine wants his support, and in consideration Blaine will make Allison his political heir. It is not improbable there is some ground for this dispatch. Allison is a Western man with Western ideas, and Blaine an Eastern man who might as well have lived in the West as far as local influence affect a man's opinion. Blaine is the older of the two, and by far the more prominent. Allison probably wants to be President, but he is young enough to wait for 1892 or even 1896. If Mr. Blaine and Mr. Conkling had been locked up in the same room in 1876, so that they could not have avoided companionship, the political history of this country might have been materially changed. Blaine and Conkling were both aspirants for the nomination that fell to Hayes as a compromise candidate. Neither was strong enough to nominate himself, but either was strong enough to defeat the other. In 1880 Conkling devoted himself to the nomination of Grant, and Blaine, not much hoping for the nomination himself, was content to nominate Garfield in place of Grant. This was a victory for Blaine over Conkling. But Conkling had his triumph the same year. Maine, in its Fall election, indicated a political revolution. Neither Grant nor Conkling had spoken a word in behalf of Garfield. Defeated the Republican party squarely in the face and inclined the dominant wing to conciliate the wing defeated in the convention. An understanding was reached by which Conkling was induced to enter into the canvas in support of Garfield. A series of meetings were held in New York, at which Conkling was the orator and Grant the silent advocate of his own successful opponent. The combination turned the tide and elected Garfield. Now, if Blaine and Conkling had buried the hatchet in 1876 both might have been President ere this. They were distinctively leaders of their party. United they would have been invincible. Blaine and Allison are personal friends, and can the more readily form such an alliance as is outlined above. If Blaine is not nominated in 1888 Allison may succeed.

PASTEUR'S TREATMENT. The committee of eminent British physicians and experts appointed a year ago to inquire into the method and utility of M. Pasteur's treatment of hydrophobia have made a report which must be very encouraging to him. The committee say: "The number of deaths assigned by those who have sought to prove the inutility of M. Pasteur's treatment is, as nearly as we can ascertain, forty out of 2,682, and in this number are included seven deaths from bites by wolves and probably not less than four in which it is doubtful whether the deaths were due to hydrophobia or to some other disease." This is a powerful confirmation of the French physiologist's claim. But it is greatly strengthened by other statements made by the committee. They say: "Of 233 persons bitten by animals in which rabies was proved, either by inoculation from their spinal cord or by the occurrence of rabies in other animals or in persons bitten by them, only four died. Without inoculation it would have been expected that at least forty would have died." But it seems from the report of this able committee that M. Pasteur has been steadily increasing the efficacy of his treatment. Between the end of last December and the end of March he inoculated 509 persons bitten by animals proved to have been rabid. The official report says of this number only two have died, and one of these was bitten by a wolf a month before inoculation.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that commercial travelers are no privileged class so far as railroad transportation is concerned. If they are entitled to mileage tickets at reduced rates, so is the balance of the traveling public. This is certainly equitable and in accordance with the spirit of the law, if any well-defined spirit exists in that remarkable enactment. The consumer of the goods must pay full fare and there is no reason why the seller should be in better position.

Kept a Cash Grocery. "Yes," said the widow, as she attempted to dry tears. "John died very poor, worse than penniless. I may say, as he left nothing and owed some $3,000 which I must pay by wading. What was the matter! Oh, you see, John started a 'strictly cash' grocery, and so he had to 'trust everybody,' and his money gave out. That was all."

Accidentally Killed. Frank Boyer, a young Englishman, whose family is said to be wealthy and aristocratic, while handling a pistol at Santa Cruz last Sunday, was killed by its accidental discharge.

THE MOORE CASE. The Story of Alice's Death, as Told by the Defendant.

Reno Gazette: The hearing of testimony in the Moore case was continued in the District Court this morning, the usual number of spectators being present. The defendant, L. J. Moore, was called to the witness stand, and as will be seen by the synopsis of his testimony that we print, some "tall" swearing has been done in the case. In substance, he said: It was about 11 o'clock of the night of the 1st of April, 1885, when I got home; Alice met me at the outside bars; she went home with me; Paradine and Mattie, who afterwards joined us, went off with the sheep; they came home about half an hour after Alice and I got there; on our way to the house there were no harsh words passed between any of the girls and I; it was about half an hour after I got home that I ate supper; I think it was ready for me when I got there; Alice got the supper ready for me; my wife was in the kitchen at the time; the girls had not at that time returned to the house; it was while I was eating supper that they came in; they sat down at the table shortly afterwards; Alice waited upon the table, she poured out my tea and said, "Papa, this is the last cup of tea I will ever pour for you." I asked her what was the matter, and she said, "This is the last tea I will ever pour out for you." I saw her shortly afterwards pull her bonnet over her face and eat something; I went to her and told her not to kill herself; I gave her an apple; she bit it, but did not eat it; she said, "Papa, are you going to sit up all night?" it was then about 12 o'clock; I said no, that we would go to bed; Lafayette came in to get his blankets; I was attending to Alice and did not see whether he got them or not; the other girls were in the kitchen when I was talking with Alice; it was about 12 o'clock when I went to bed; could not say if the other girls went to bed then or not; Alice and I went off together; I don't think my wife slept with Alice that night; Alice complained that night of not feeling well; she was always complaining; it was of her stomach that night; after going to bed, said, "Papa, we have forgotten to lock the door." I told her I would attend to it, which I did; it was then half-past 12 o'clock; I was uneasy about her and did not sleep well; early in the morning I called her to get up to get breakfast; she said she was not able to; that she could not walk; I got up and went to her; she said she was going to have fits; I called the girls; they came in, and I told Mattie to bring me a tablecloth; that I wanted to put it into her mouth to keep her from cutting her tongue and lip; at this time she had a fit; Mattie brought the spoon; the spoon slipped out of her mouth and she came near biting my finger, she had four convulsions; it was during the second that she came near biting my finger; when she went into fits I told Mattie to call her mother, and then call Lafayette and Ida, they came in; she was then in the second fit; Alice looked at her mother and caught her by the hand; that was I believe, the last move she made; in the third fit her mother said, "Lay her down and let her die; she then stretched out, threw her head back and died; her mouth was drawn, and the cords of her neck were extremely large; her eyes rolled back a little; that was the manner of her death; her heart fluttered greatly; all of the family were present when she died; we all stood around the bed and cried; I walked some around the floor; we covered her up in the bed; I said she was gone, and we could never get her back again; we talked of her having taken poison, and then having died of heart disease; she ruined her health by taking heavy colds when she was only 16 years old; afterwards, at times, she acted as though she were insane, and I made her quit herding cows; when she died it was not yet daylight; I laid Ida in the back part of the bed; I told Lafayette to go after Mr. Sanders; when he started it was just about daylight; he did not get back until between 7 and 8 o'clock; Mr. Sanders got there between 10 and 11 o'clock; I did not whip any of my children the night of Alice's death; I did not overturn any table; I did not see anything of the kind; I did not strike my son that night; I worshipped Alice; after she commenced having fits she asked for a drink; she put her arms around my neck and said, "Papa, I love you;" she did not vomit; the fits lasted for probably 15 minutes; during them I told Mattie and Parrie to catch two chickens; they caught one, killed it and secured nearly half a cup of blood; I endeavored to make Alice drink it; my reason for applying this remedy was because my mother used it for fits; I gave Alice a drink of whiskey before that; then I gave her water, then blood. Cross-examination—Was born in Odrane county, Missouri; am 52 years of age; left Missouri when I was about 14 years of age; I came across the plains with my father; that was in 1850; was never married until I married my wife; I did state in the Justice's Court that she was not my wife; that I had another woman living; but not another wife. It being 12 o'clock, a recess was taken until 1 p. m. Among the witnesses examined this afternoon, after the testimony of the defendant ended, were Coroner Brown, Undertaker Sanders and Druggist Hodgkinson. The two former were called merely to testify that the body exhumed recently was that of Alice Moore; the latter testified to having made an analysis of the stomach of the deceased and found strychnine in it. He was on the stand at 4 p. m.

An Injury to the County. The sheep which are annually driven into the mountains are fast destroying the county as a grazing ground. It is not what they eat, but what they destroy by trampling the grass into the ground, and at times when the feed is short the roots of the grass are dug up and eaten. There are many localities in this vicinity where bunch grass used in former years to grow a foot in height where now the ground is as barren as a desert. They are also one of the greatest timber-destroying agencies known, and it is a difficult matter to rear up a new growth of trees where sheep are permitted to roam at will over the country. There is but one way to keep them out of the mountains in this vicinity, and that is by the refusal of land owners to permit them to graze thereon. Most of the land in this vicinity is owned by the railroad company and a few prominent mill companies. If these persons would combine and refuse to lease lands to sheep men it would force them to seek other pastures and thus rid the community of an intolerable nuisance. It would be money in their pockets to do so, as it would be saving of the young and tender pine which will sometime be very valuable.—Truckee Republican.

Persistent Curiosity. Yung Phong Lee, the Americanized Chinaman, and his Connecticut wife, have been so annoyed by persistent curiosity of Summer visitors at Narragansett Pier that they have returned to New Haven and will not continue their journey. This is a sad illustration of American good manners.

A Challenge. The Emeralds Baseball Club sent a communication to the Amateurs, of Carson, challenging them to play a game at Candelaria for any amount from $100 to $1,500 a side. The Emeralds will meet them half way, and play at Hawthorne if agreeable to the Amateurs.

Remarkable Aptitude. "Woman is displaying a remarkable aptitude for taking care of herself," says an exchange. What is wanted, is not so much a woman who can take care of herself as one who can, in addition, take care of her husband and three children in a fairly good style.
