

The House of the Whispering Pines

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910, By Anna Katharine Rohlf

(Continued.)

"She does not know yet what is in store for her," were his words, and I could only lie still and look at him helplessly. "When she comes to her self she will have to be told, but you will be on your feet then and will be allowed, no doubt, to soften the blow for her by your comfort and counsel. The fact that it must have been you, if not he—"

"He?" Did I shout it, or was the shout simply in my own mind?

"Yes—Arthur. His guilt has not been proved; he has not even been remanded; the sister's case is too pitiful and Coroner Perry too soft hearted where any of that family is involved. But no one doubts his guilt, and he does not deny it himself. You know—probably no one better—that he cannot very consistently do this in the face of the evidence accumulated against him, evidence stronger in many regards than that accumulated against yourself."

Arthur! A booby and a boor, but certainly not the slayer of his sister, unless I had been woefully mistaken in all that had taken place in that clubhouse previous to my entrance into it on that fatal night. As I caught Clifford's eye fixed upon me I said: "Don't speak of me. I'm not thinking of myself. You speak of evidence. What evidence? Give me details. Don't you see that I am burning with curiosity? I shan't be myself till I hear."

"It all came about through you," he went on. "You told me of the fellow you saw riding away from the Whispering Pines at the time you entered the grounds. I passed the story on to the coroner and he to a New York detective they had put on this case. He and Arthur's own surly nature did the rest."

I cringed where I lay. This was my work. The person who drove out of the clubhouse ground while I stood in the clubhouse hall was Carmel, and the clew I had given, instead of baffling and confusing them, had led directly to Arthur.

Seeing nothing peculiar—or, at all events, giving no evidence of having noted anything peculiar in my movement—Clifford went evenly on, pouring into my astonished ears the whole long story of the detective's investigations.

Instinctively I did not feel as certain of Arthur's guilt as Clifford did. I knew Arthur even better than I did his sisters. He was as full of faults and as lacking in amiable and reliable traits as any fellow of my acquaintance. But he had not the inherent snap which makes for crime. He lacked the vigor which—God forgive me the thought—lay back of Carmel's softer characteristics.

The episode of the ring confused me. I could make nothing out of it, could not connect it with what I myself knew of the confused experiences of that night. But I could recall the dinner and the sullen aspect, not unmixed with awe, with which this boy contemplated his sister when his own glass fell from his nerveless fingers. My own heart was not in the business—it was on the elopement I had planned—but I could not help seeing what I have just mentioned, and it returned to me now with fatal distinctness. The awe was as great as the sullenness. Did that offer a good foundation for crime? I disliked Arthur. I had no use for the boy, and I wished with all my heart to detect guilt in his actions rather than in those of the woman I loved, but I could not forget that tinge of awe on features too heavy to mirror very readily the nicer feelings of the human soul. It would come up, and under the influence of this impression I said:

"Are you sure that he made no denial of this crime? That does not seem like Arthur, guilty or innocent."

"He made none in my presence, and I was in the coroner's office when the ring was produced from its secret hiding place and set down before him."

There was no open accusation made, but he must have understood the silence of all present. He acknowledged some days ago, when confronted with the bottle found in Cuthbert road, that he had taken on both it and another from the clubhouse just before the storm began that night."

"The hour; the very hour!" I muttered.

"ARE YOU SURE HE MADE NO DENIAL?" He entered and left by that upper hall window, or so he says, but he is not to be believed in all his statements. Some of his declarations we know to be false."

"Which ones? Give me a specimen. Charlie. Mention something he has said that you know to be false."

"Well, it is hard to accuse a man of a direct lie. But he cannot be telling the truth when he says that he crossed the links immediately to Cuthbert road, thus cutting out the ride home of which we have such extraordinary proof."

Under the fear of betraying my thoughts I hurriedly closed my eyes. I was in an extraordinary position myself. What seemed falsehood to them struck me as the absolute truth. Carmel had been the one to go home; he, without doubt, had crossed the links as he said. As this conviction penetrated deeply and yet more deeply into my mind I shrank inexpressibly from the renewed mental struggle into which it plunged me. To have suffered myself—to have fallen under the ban of suspicion and the disgrace of arrest—had certainly been hard, but it was nothing to beholding another in the same plight through my own rash and ill advised attempt to better my position and Carmel's by what I had considered a totally harmless subterfuge.

Forced by doubt to open my eyes, I met Clifford's full look turned watchfully on me. The result was calming. Even to my apprehensive gaze it betrayed no new enlightenment. My struggle had been all within. No token of it had reached him.

"There will be a close sitting of evidence at the inquest. You will not enjoy this, but the situation, hard as it may prove, has certainly improved so far as you are concerned. That should hasten your convalescence."

"Poor Arthur!" burst from my lips, and the cry was echoed in my heart. "What sort of man would you make him out to be when you accuse him of robbing the wine vault on top of a murderous assault on his sister?"

"I know. It argues a brute, but he—"

"Arthur Cumberland is selfish, unrepentant and hard, but he is not a brute. I'm disposed to give him the benefit of my good opinion to this extent, Charlie. I cannot believe he first poisoned and then choked that noble woman."

Clifford drew himself up in his turn, astonishment battling with renewed distrust.

"Either he or you, Ranelagh," he exclaimed firmly. "There is no third person. This you must realize."

Was Arthur in the clubhouse when I first stepped into it? It was just possible. I had been to prevaricate as to the moment I entered the lower gateway, and he may have done the same as to the hour he left by the upper hall window. Whatever his denials on this or any subject, I was convinced that he knew as well as I that Carmel had been in the building with her sister and was involved more or less personally in the crime committed there. Might it not be simply as his accessory after the fact? If only I could believe this!

But she had gone in disguise to the Whispering Pines, and she had returned home in the same suspicious fashion. The wearing of her brother Arthur's hat and coat over her own womanly garments was no freak. There had been purpose in it—a purpose which demanded secrecy. That Adelaide should have accompanied her under these circumstances was a mystery. But then the whole affair was a mystery, totally out of keeping in all its details with the characters of these women, save—and what a fearful exception I here make—the awful end, which, as she spoke the fiery words and impulse to destroy which marked Carmel's unbridled rage.

Of a less emotional attack she would be as incapable as any other good woman. Poison she would never use. It's presence there was due to another's forethought, another's determination. But the poison had not killed. Both glasses had been emptied, but—ah, those glasses! What explanation had the police now for those two emptied glasses? They had hitherto supposed me to be the second person who had joined Adelaide in this totally uncharacteristic drinking.

Knowing nothing of Carmel having been on the scene, they must ascribe this act either to Arthur or to me, and when they came to dwell upon this point more particularly they must see the improbability of her drinking with him under any circumstances. Then their thoughts would recur to me, and I should find myself again accused. The monstrous suggestion that Arthur had brought the liquor there himself, had poured it out and forced her to drink it, poison and all, out of revenge for her action at the dinner table a short time before, did not occur to me then, but if it had there were three glasses—he would not bring three, nor would Adelaide, nor, as I saw it, would Carmel.

Chaos—however one looked at it, chaos! Only one fact was clear—that Carmel knew the whole story and might communicate the same if ever her brain cleared and she could be brought to reveal the mysteries of that hour.

Did I really desire such a consummation? Only God could tell. I only know that the fear and expectation of such an outcome made my anguish for the next two weeks.

Would she live? Would she die? The question was on every tongue. The crisis of her disease was approaching, and the next twenty-four hours would decide her fate, and in consequence my own, if not her brother Arthur's.

As I contemplated the suspense of these twenty-four hours I revolved madly for the first time against the restrictions of my prison. I wanted air, movement, the rush into danger, which my horse or my automobile might afford—anything which would drag my thoughts from that sick room and the anticipated stir of that lovely form into conscious life and suffering.

Clifford told me no one was allowed in the sick room but the nurse and the doctor. Even Arthur was denied admission and was wearing himself out in his own room, as I was wearing myself out here, in restless inactivity. He expected her to sink and never to recover consciousness and was loud in his expressions of rebellion against the men who dared to keep him from her bedside when her life was trembling in the balance. But the nurse had hopes, and so had the doctor. As for Carmel's looks, they were greatly changed, but beautiful still in spite of the cruel scar left by her fall against the burning bars of her sister's grate. No delirium disturbed the rigid immobility in which she now lay. I could await her awakening with quiet confidence in the justice of God. Thus Clifford, in his ignorance.

The day was a bleak one, and the evening hours were no better. The hands on my watch crawled. When the door finally opened it came as a shock. I knew that it was Clifford who entered, but I could not meet his eye.

I dug my nails into both my palms and waited for his first word. When it came I felt my spirits go down, down. I had thought them at their lowest ebb before. He hesitated and I started up:

"Tell me," I cried—"Carmel is dead?"

"Not dead," said he, "but silly. Her testimony is no more to be relied upon than that of any other wandering mind."

CHAPTER XV.

"BREAK IN THE GLASS"

IT was some time before I learned the particulars of Carmel's awakening. It had occurred at sunset. With the exception of the doctor and possibly the nurse, only those interested in her as a witness in the most perplexing case on the police annals were grouped in silent watchfulness about the room of mystery.

It came suddenly, as all great changes come. One moment her lids were down, her face calm, her whole figure quiet in its statue-like repose; the next her big violet eyes had flashed open upon the world, and lips and limbs were moving feebly but certainly in their suddenly recovered freedom. She murmured, half petulantly:

"Why do you look at me so? Oh, I remember, I remember! What's the matter? I cannot move as I used to do. I feel—I feel!"

"You have been ill," came soothingly from the doctor. "You have been in bed many days. Now you are better and will soon be well. This is your nurse." He said nothing of the others, who were so placed behind screens as to be invisible to her.

She continued to gaze first at one then at the other. As she did so the flush faded and gave way to an anxious, troubled expression—not just the expression anticipated by those who believed that with returning consciousness would come returning memory of the mysterious scene which had taken place between herself and her sister or between her sister and her brother prior to Adelaide's departure for the Whispering Pines.

"You have the same kind look for me as always," were her next words as her glance finally settled on the doctor. "But how—bring me the mirror!" she cried. "Let me see with my own eyes what I have now to expect from every one who looks at me. I want to know before Lila comes in. Why, isn't she here? Is she with—will—Then in the shrill tones which will not be denied she demanded again, "The mirror!" Nurse Unwin brought it. Carmel was still for a long time, during which the nurse carried off the glass.

"I—I don't like it," Carmel acknowledged quietly to the doctor as he leaned over her with compassionate words. "I shall have to get acquainted with myself all over again. And so I have been ill! I shouldn't have thought a little burn like that would make me ill. How Adelaide must have worried!"

"Adelaide is—is not well herself. It distressed her to have been out when you fell. Don't you remember that she went out that night?"

"Did she? She was right. Adelaide must have every pleasure. She has—"

"Why isn't she here?" I asked her good times, I must be the one to stay home and look after things and learn to be useful. I don't expect anything different. Call Adelaide and let me tell her how—how satisfied I am."

"But she's ill. She cannot come. Wait till tomorrow, dear child. Rest is what you need now. Take these few drops and go to sleep again."

"I can't take it," she protested. "I forget now why, but I can't take anything more from a glass. I've promised not to, I think. Take it away. It makes me feel queer. Where is Adelaide?"

Her memory was defective. She could not seem to take in what the doctor told her. But he tried her again. Once more he spoke of illness as the cause of Adelaide's absence. Her attention wandered while he spoke of it.

"How it did hurt!" she cried. "But I didn't think much about it. I thought only of—Next moment her voice rose in a shriek, thin, but impetuous, and imbued with a note of excited feeling which made every person there start. "There should be two!" she cried. "Two! Why is there only one?"

This sounded like raving. The doctor's face took on a look of concern, and the nurse stirred uneasily.

"One is not enough! That is why Adelaide is not satisfied. Why does she not come and love and comfort me, as I expected her to? Tell her it is not too late yet, not too late yet, not too late!"

The doctor's hand was on her forehead. "Rest," came in Dr. Carpenter's most soothing tones—"rest, my little Carmel; forget everything and rest." He thought he knew the significance of her revolt from the glass he had offered.

Dr. Lyon's PERFECT Tooth Powder

cleanses, preserves and beautifies the teeth, prevents tooth decay and imparts purity and fragrance to the breath ferred her. She remembered the scene at the Cumberland dinner table on that fatal night and shrank from anything that reminded her of it. Ordering the medicine put in a cup, he offered it to her again, and she drank it without question. As she quelled under its influence the disappointed listeners, now tiptoeing carefully from the room, heard her murmur in final appeal:

"Cannot Adelaide spare one minute from—from her company downstairs to wish me health and kiss me good night?"

Was it weakness or a settled inability to remember anything but that which filled her own mind?

It proved to be a settled inability to take in any new ideas or even to remember much beyond the completion of that dinner. As the days passed and news of her condition came to me from time to time I found that she had not only forgotten what had passed between herself and the rest of the family previous to their departure for the clubhouse, but all that had afterward occurred at the Whispering Pines, even to her own presence there and the ride home. She could not even retain in her mind for any appreciable length of time the idea of Adelaide's death. Even after Dr. Carpenter, with infinite precautions, revealed to her the truth—not that Adelaide had been murdered, but that Adelaide had passed away during the period of her own illness—Carmel gave but one cry of grief, then immediately burst forth in her old complaint that Adelaide neglected her. She had lost her happiness and hope and Adelaide would not spare her an hour.

This expression when I heard of it convinced me, as I believe it did some others, that her act of self denial in not humoring my whim and flying from home and duty that night had made a stronger impression on her mind than all that came after.

She never asked for Arthur. This may have grieved him; but, according to my faithful friend and attorney, it appeared to have the contrary effect and to bring him positive relief. When it was borne in on him, as it was soon to be borne in on all, that her mind was not what it was he grew noticeably more cheerful and less suspicious in his manner.

With this new shock of Carmel's inability to explain her own part in the tragedy and thus release my testimony and make me a man again in my own eyes I lost the sustaining power which had previously held me up. I became apathetic, no longer counting the hours and thankful when they passed. Arthur had not been arrested, but he understood or allowed others to see that he understood the reason for the surveillance under which he was now strictly kept.

Of the inquest, which was held in due course, I shall not say much. Only one new fact was elicited by its means, and that of interest solely as making clear how there came to be evidences of poison in Adelaide's stomach without the quantity being great enough for more than a temporary disturbance.

Maggie, the second girl, had something to say about this when the vital which held the poison was handed about for inspection. She had handled that vital many times on the shelf where it was kept. Once she had dropped it, and the cork coming out, some of the contents had escaped. Frightened at the mishap, she had filled the vial up with water and put it, thus diluted, back on the shelf. No one had noticed the difference, and she had forgotten all about the matter until now. From her description, my own mind had been very little of the dangerous drug left in the vial and the jury rendered the noncommittal verdict:

"Death by strangulation at the hands of some person unknown."

I had expected this. The evidence, pointing as it did in two opposing directions, presented a problem which a coroner's jury could hardly be expected to solve. I was allowed one sweet half hour of freedom; then I was detained to await the action of the grand jury, and so was Arthur.

When I was informed of this latter fact I made a solemn vow to myself. It was this: If it falls to my lot to be indicted for this murderous offense I will continue to keep my own counsel. But if I escape and a true bill should be found against Arthur then will I follow my better instinct and reveal what I have hitherto kept concealed, even if the torment of the betrayal drives me to self destruction afterward. For I no longer cherished the smallest doubt that to Carmel's sudden rage, and to that alone, the death of Adelaide was due.

My reason for this change from troubled to absolute conviction can be easily explained. It dated from the inquest and will best appear in the relation of an interview I held with my attorney, Charles Clifford, very soon after my second incarceration.

We had discussed the situation till there seemed to be nothing left to discuss. I understand him, and he thought he understood me. He believed Arthur guilty and credited me with the same convictions. Thus only could he explain my inconceivable reticence on certain points he was very well assured I could make clear if I would. That he was not the only man who had drawn these same conclusions from my attitude both before and during the inquest troubled me greatly and deeply disturbed my conscience.

I introduced the topic thus:

(To Be Continued.)

Chicago—The auto smashup in the great Indianapolis race, which Arthur Greiner was injured, revealed the fact that Greiner was married secretly five months ago to Miss Gladys Sykes.

HAWLEY WILMOT & REYNOLDS
Undertakers and Embalmers
No. 163 State St., Bridgeport, Ct.
All calls, day or night, answered from office. George B. Hawley, Vice St., near Park Av., Ed-ward H. Wilmot, 865 Clinton Av., John B. Reynolds, 225 West Av.

Wm. Lieberum & Son
Embalmer and Undertaker
Office and Residence
531 MAIN STREET
Telephone Connection

John F. Gallagher
Undertakers and Embalmers
Margaret L. Gallagher
The only graduate and licensed woman in the city
571 FAIRFIELD AV. Tel. 1390

ROURKE & ROURKE
Undertakers and Embalmers
1295 MAIN STREET, Tel. 1661
Calls Answered Day or Night

AUGUST G. BAKER
Funeral Director and Embalmer
Office, 1520 Seaview Ave.
Telephone 1693-5.
Calls Answered Night or Day from Office 330 4tr

M. J. GANNON
FUNERAL DIRECTOR AND EMBALMER
1051 Broad St., near John
Phone 5482
Residence, 1650 Park Ave.
Phone 1289

The Pierce, Jr. B.D. Pierce, Co.
GENERAL CONTRACTORS
Driveways built and repaired, trap rock used. Excavating and grading of all descriptions.
Now is the time to do this work. Call us up. Phone 2770.
122 BANK ST.

RESTAURANTS
THE BEST 25c COURSE DINNER in Bridgeport. Home cooking. Everything clean and sanitary. N. P. Restaurant, 200 Fairfield Ave. R 11 4tr.

STEAMBOATS

Bridgeport Line FOR NEW YORK
Fare 60 Cents
Steamer BRIDGEPORT leaves Bridgeport, Fairfield Avenue Wharf, week days, at 8 a. m. Returning, leave New York, week days, Pier 27, E. R., 3 p. m., foot of East 22nd Street, 3:30 p. m.
Steamer NAUGATUCK leaves Bridgeport, Pennock Dock, foot of Union Street, daily, except Saturdays, at 12 night. Returning, leave New York, Pier 27, E. R., daily, except Sundays, at 11 a. m.

Sundays to New York
Steamer BRIDGEPORT will make Sunday excursions to New York until September 3d inclusive, leaving Fairfield Avenue Wharf at 9 a. m. Returning, leave New York, foot of East 22nd Street, at 5:30 p. m.
FARE FOR ROUND TRIP 75c
Children, 40c
Tickets good only for date sold
Music by Wheeler & Wilson Orchestra
L. B. Nickerson, Agent, Bridgeport.

MERCHANT'S LINE
Daily Except Sunday
Leaves New York, Pier 19, East River, 3 p. m. Arrive Bridgeport, 7:30 p. m. Leave Bridgeport, Joy Line Dock, 2 a. m. Arrive New York 7 a. m. For further information and rates apply to W. H. FEASE, Agent.

Old Dominion Line
Affording Pleasure and Rest
A Short Sea Trip to Old Point Comfort, Norfolk, Richmond and Washington, D. C.
Round trip tickets, including meals and stateroom berth on Old Dominion Steamers
New York to Norfolk or Old Point and return, $14.00
New York to Richmond or Washington, D. C., and return $15.00
The Only Direct Line to Old Point Comfort and Norfolk Without Change
Steamers are all equipped with the United Wireless Telegraph System
Hot or Cold Sea Water Baths may be Procured on Steamer Without Charge

Steamers Sail Every Week Day at 3 P. M.
Tickets and Stateroom Reservations, Pier 25, North River, Foot of North Moore Street, New York
Send for illustrated pamphlet, Desk "R"
W. L. WOODBORN, Traffic Manager
J. J. BROWN, Gen. Passenger Agent
General Offices, Pier 25, North River, New York R 11 4tr

Rich Cut Glass
All the Latest Articles and Designs at Moderate Price
HENRY C. REID
1085 BROAD ST., just Opp. P. O.

CLASSIFIED WANTS FOR FARMER READERS

MALE HELP WANTED.

WANTED.—First class toolmaker on dies, jigs and fixtures. American Graphophone Co. Apply 9 a. m. Employment Office, Howard Ave. R 27 4tr

WANTED.—Responsible young men, saws filed, lawn mowers sharpened, and all kinds of light repairs done at Smith's Gun Store, 32 Wall Street, Tel. 76-4. R 14 4tr

SITUATIONS WANTED.

CHAUFFEUR wants position either in or out of town. Can do own repairs. Good references. Address E. N. T. care Farmer. R 25 4tr

TO RENT—FURNISHED ROOMS.

TO RENT.—Furnished rooms, for light housekeeping, suites of two rooms each. 436-438 Main Street. D 1 a 4tr

FOR LIGHT housekeeping. Running water. Bath. Address Reasonable, care of Farmer. R 17 4tr

PLEASANTLY SITUATED. Awnings on three front windows. Use of porch, centrally located. Tel. Howard V. M. C. care of Farmer. R 17 4tr

A LARGE FRONT ROOM to man or woman or man and wife. References exchanged. All modern improvements, both connected. Address Room, care of Farmer. R 17 4tr

PERSONAL

CARD READER—Advice on all affairs. 25c. Mrs. Levy, 674 Madison Ave., fourth floor above 12th Ave. G 6 4tr

EDUCATIONAL

THE BRIDGEPORT AUTO SCHOOL, 145 Stratford Avenue, road lesson specialty, selective type, magneto, equipment right up-to-date, satisfaction guaranteed, Saturday afternoons and evenings. R 13 4tr

DRAFTSMEN, mechanical architectural or structural, are always in demand at good salaries; ten young men wanted to join club, trial sent drawing, at home evenings; instruments furnished. Address C. S. K. Box 225, City. U 25 4tr

PIANOS AND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PIANO TUNING by factory men, at regular prices. Ask about our yearly contract plan. Wissner, Broad and State Sts. R 18 4tr

USED PIANOS FOR SALE, standard make, will sell at great sacrifice for cash. Part payment down. Address Piano, care of Farmer. R 17 4tr

MAIL ORDER

I MADE $50,000 in five years in the mail order business; began with $5. Send for free booklet. Tel. Howard, Heacock, 765, Lockport, N. Y. R 28 2 4 5 6 tr

LADIES' ATTENTION—Ladies will avoid worry by using our remedy for delayed period, and which is the only reliable monthly remedy for sale. Thousands of testimonials we have from our patrons to prove it. Positively refuse all others, no matter what for. Send for free booklet. Paris Cosmetics Co., Milwaukee, Wis. T 22 4tr

FOR SALE

BUILDING LOTS FOR SALE at Wells Place, Washington Bridge, Boston Park on Boston Ave. Second view. Heights east of Hollister Heights, Morland towards North Main St. Low prices, easy terms. 1 per cent off for cash. Get busy and provide a home site for yourself while these bargains are in the market. JAMES FEELEY, 7 Arcade.

FOR SALE

In Fairfield, about one-half mile from trolley. Small place, 24 acres with good 10 room house in first class condition, including large barn and shed. Apply to THOMAS FORSYTH, Fairfield, Conn.

TO RENT

FOR RENT—One store and rent, 1786 Main St. H 2 4tr

FOR RENT—Centrally located, first floor apartment, No. 202 Golden Hill St., 7 rooms and bath. Every room heated, modern plumbing, set bowls in all chambers, all improvements. Will show by appointment. Apply to Frank W. Hurd, 451 Washington Avenue. Telephone 1726. U 16 4tr

TO-RENT

Large hall. Central location Suitable for large meetings. See BARTRAM & GREEN

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

NEW SUMMER coats, suits and gowns of attractive designs. Mrs. Fien, Modiste, 469 S. 5th Street. R 26 4tr

WANTED—Housekeepers to try "Infusoria Cream," the finest and best silver polish known. Cleaning guaranteed. Ask your dealer for it. S 26 4tr

WANTED—Cottage, furnished, at Walnut Beach or Laurel Beach, from July 15th. Small family. Address stating terms and location. Vacation, care of Farmer. P 9 4tr

FOR NEW HAVEN—12:30 P. M. 4:45, 5:15, 5:45, 6:25, 7:17, 7:45, 8:25, 8:51, 9:06, 10:00, 11:05 A. M. 12:03 P. M. 1:20, 2:15, 2:45, 3:25, 4:15, 5:07, 5:27, 6:12, 6:30, 7:12, 8:11, 9:36, 9:55 P. M. SUNDAYS—12:30 P. M. 4:45, 5:15, 5:45, 6:25, 7:17, 7:45, 8:25, 8:51, 9:06, 10:00, 11:05 A. M. 12:03 P. M. 1:20, 2:15, 2:45, 3:25, 4:15, 5:07, 5:27, 6:12, 6:30, 7:12, 8:11, 9:36, 9:55 P. M.

FOR WASHINGTON, via Harlem River—12:30 (daily) A. M. 12:03 P. M.

FOR NEW HAVEN—12:30, 12:32, 1:41, 6:50, 7:55, 9:21, 9:25, 10:43, 11:23 A. M. 12:27, 12:30, 1:41, 2:29, 3:31, 4:23, 4:57, 5:29, 6:02, 6:40, 6:54, 7:13, 7:32, 8:42, 10:23 P. M. SUNDAYS—12:30, 1:41, 2:29, 3:31, 4:23, 4:57, 5:29, 6:02, 6:40, 6:54, 7:13, 7:32, 8:42, 10:23 P. M.

FOR BOSTON, via Hartford and Willimantic—9:21 A. M. 9:31 P. M.