

This contractor got results.

Some years ago a contractor building a railroad in a warm climate was troubled a great deal by sickness among the laborers.

He turned his attention at once to their food and found that they were getting full rations of meat and were drinking water from a stream near by.

He issued orders to cut down the amount of meat and to increase greatly the quantity of Quaker Scotch Oats fed to the men.

He also boiled Quaker Scotch Oats and mixed the thin oatmeal water with their drinking water. Almost instantly all signs of stomach disorders passed and his men showed a decided improvement in strength and spirits. This contractor had experience that taught him the great value of good oatmeal.

Packed in regular packages and in hermetically sealed tins for hot climates.

I went out one night, with my high-priced thirt, to loaf in the booze bazaar, and as I sampled the old red dope, I leaned on the handsome bar. My purse was full of the good long green, and my raiment was smooth and sew, and I looked as slick as a cabbage rose just kissed by the morning dew. Behind the bottle a mirror stood, as large as your parlor floor, and I looked and looked in the shining glass, and wondered, and looked some more. My own reflection did not appear, but there where it should have been, I saw the form of a cringing bum, all crumpled and soaked with gin. His nose was red and his eyes were dim, unshorn was his swollen face, and I thought it queer such a seedy bum would come to so smooth a place. I turned around for a better look at this effigy of despair, and nearly fell in a little heap for the effigy wasn't there! The bar-keep laughed: "It's the Magic Glass," he said with a careless yawn; "It shows a man how he's apt to look years hence when his roll is gone."
