It remains to be seen whether or not any American woman of large social conne tions will follow the novel lead of Lady Brassey, of London. This enterprising woman found that it was an immen of work to be obliged to send out a couple of thousand announcement cards to her friends each time she desired to give a reception and she hit upon a new idea. At her last reception she did away with invitations altogether and two days before society columns of the London papers that she would be at home at such an hour on a certain day. Her friends all responded most cordially and the scheme seemed a success. There is one objection to be made, however. The following of this plan would preclude the making of new friends. Casual acquaintances of shy nature might be timid about putting in their appearance at Lady Brassey's with-out a more prongunced invitation. Amer-ican women, it is to be feared, will not take kindly to the idea.

London, Sept. 9.-The sensation of the four in London is the journey of the young Duke of Marlborough to America. He will tour the United States, be entertained in

New York and Newport and will return.

Gossip says he will not come back without a bride. But at this point the tongues of the busy dame wag in different directions. According to one set the Duke went to the United States to find an beiress. According to the other, the young lady has been already found by his Dukeship, and he goes to America to announce his engagement and to be married in great state in a few months.

There is more foundation for the truth of the latter than of the former, for the friends of Lady William Beresford stoutly cling to the rumor of the Duke's American be trothal for a year past, and some go so far as to say that he will, to a certainty, be

When the Duke of Mariborough mar ries Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, according to Lady William's friends, he offers her not an empty title nor a jaded heart. The young duke is like a fresh-faced baby in looks, and his manner, which is ingenuous and engaging, is not that of one who has seen affect at twenty-three.

The Duke's fortune consists only of the Blenheim acres, which yield now about $10,000 annually. But this is a more considerable sum in England than in America Besides this amount be will have the moneyed gifts of Lady Peresford, which are always as a great heiress. She is quite handsome in the eyes of the British, although a little too much of her mother's Spanish type lingers around the drooping eyes and pointed chin to be the wholly ruddy ideal of the English. If the Duke chooses her she will hold her own with the beautiful Americans ALL WANT AMERICANS

When the Deke of Maritorough mar ries an American girl he will be the third of the Churchill family to choose brides of that country. His uncle, Lord Randolph Churchill, married Jennie Jerome laughter of Leonard Jerome, of New York, and his father married Mrs. Lily Price Hamersley, of the same city. Both lived exceptionally brilliant and happy lives after their American marriages, and there has been bred in the young duke the strongest admiration for American women. The men of Maritorough, from the first duke down to the present day, have been of what was right and of self-enjoyment have been relentlessly carried out whether with weal to their own family or woe, chioness Blandford, and divorced her, or allowed her easily to get a divorce. loved the American duchess and lived devoted to her. He would not allow her to spend all her income on him, and she had to content herself with fxiing up the family estate, Bleubeim. For her sake he susbanded his already depleted fortune, farmer and remained a model, though hating to the last the Marchioness Bland-

The young duke is strikingly like his father. From the first minute he set eyes upon the second Duchess of Mari-borough he loved her. His devotion has been to her instead of to his mother Since his father's death he has not lived with his own mother continuously for a month, but has been one of the family of the second wife. At one time there was a rumor that Lily of Martborough would marry the boy, her stepson. On the day he came of age, three years ago, she gave him all the valuable statuary and rare plants she had placed in Blenheim, fully $5,000,000 worth being represented in her ten years' her stepson gave her away and made one of he wedding party on the long wedding journey. He waits upon his stepmother, obeys Lord William's commands, gives up cigarettes and drinks only as a dutiful

Regarded from the American standpoint, this marriage of the Duke of Mariborough is the most important one of the generation Miss Vanderbilt, of fine family, will be the only American girl of title who has stepped into the dukedom under entirely favorable circumstances. Others have married divorced dukes, paupered ones, dukes of small repute, or dukes of positively bad name. The offer of the young Duke of Mariborough to the American girl may be signalized as the first one of record where a thoroughly desirable Prince of the Holy Roman Empire (one of the Duke's honorary titles) has given his hand to a thoroughly desirable American girl, and one who is not such a great helress as to smack too much of fortune-seeking on the part of Friends of Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt say that such a marriage will be the greatest happiness of a rather disappointing life. Married herself from com-parative poverty to enormous wealth, and finding the experience an unhappy one from the beginning, she has kept youthrest and hopeful for her daughter's sake. When Consuelo becomes the Duchess of Martherstein W. Williams and M. W Mariborough Mrs. Willie K. will conside all her disappointments well compensated for. At least such is the gossip of her intimate London circle, which, by the way, is a very exclusive one, and includes Louise Marchioness of Lorne. The view which London matrons take The view which London matrons take of the duke's engagement trip to the United States is a sour one. They see the best chances of the country slipping from them one by one. They have never forgiven Cornelia Bradley-Martin for taking the desirable little Count of Craven, and the remove of the country of th Craven, and the rumor of losing the duke is badly received. They were little better pleased at the rumor of his engagement to Miss Rothschilds, eldest daughter of the banker and the richest girl in the world, and they openly state that the bolder of the greatest duke's title should marry into a family of a British duke and nowhere else. The duke's attentions to Miss Rothschilds were greatly encouraged by the Rosebery-Royal-Rothschilds coterie, but the duke, through his stepmother's influence, withdrew as soon as he beheld the matriSURPRISED THEIR FRIENDS

Old Pewter Pots.

One of the most picturesque things thout London was the old pewter pots used in the public houses, which are better known as "pubs." Glasses are now coming into such general use that the pewter pot is getting to be a rarity. The extent of their popularity is evinced by the fact that the public control department of the that the public control department of the county council is now testing 50,000 a month. These glasses are tested in or-der that none shall be under measure. Every glass that is used in a public house must be stamped by the government. In that way the London workingman gets the full worth of his pennies in the matter of beer. Glass is undoubtedly cleaner than pewter, and possibly that is the
