MOSS IS PERSONA GRATIA

Judge Kimball Accepted an Apology and Revoked the Fine.

TWO UNWILLING FIGHTERS

One Said He Was Made to Scrap, But Both Went Down for Brief Terms. Held on Police Court Loafers—Crap Was the Cause of the Downfall of John Wise.

When Judge Kimball took his seat this morning and the clerk had commanded quiet in the courtroom, Lawyer Moss stepped in front of the bench, and, after reading an affidavit of books on the table, attracted the judge's attention and said: "Your honor, in regard to what occurred here yesterday between your honor and myself, I wish to make a personal explanation."

"In my zeal for the prisoners I was defending, I made use of the expression 'defiant,' which, I assure you, was not meant to apply to the court. I defied any one to find evidence which would personally and individually apply to my clients."

Mr. Moss then explained to the court that he based his remarks on section five of 'Loverjoy's Revision—Loverjoy's Subdivision,' as with a slip of the tongue, the attorney first said:

AN HUMBLE APOLOGY.

"For my other remark, I humbly apologize. I should not have said, as I noticed in the papers, that I would not defend when I get ready. That was an improper remark," continued the lawyer.

"And it was for that remark that you were fined," Mr. Moss said to his honor.

"But I accept your apology and am glad to hear these remarks. I will set aside your fine and order the money returned to you."

This ended the interesting episode that threatened yesterday to disturb the equilibrium of both court and counsel for some time to come.

"Call the first case," said his honor, anxious evidently to bring the scene to a close, and John Wise, a colored man, about thirty years old, in a face full of scars that would make the breast of a German student swell with pride, was called up and charged with disorderly conduct.

Officer Roberts was the defending guard of the peace, for according to nine-tenths of the statements made by the prisoners the officers are always the defending parties.

HE MOCKED WITH CRAP.

John had been mixed up in a crap game, according to the policeman. According to John, he just stepped up to the edge of the crowd as the officer got there. He could not exactly explain how he came to have some dice in his hand, as Mr. Roberts grabbed him, and for this missing link in his story he got fifteen days.

Benjamin Wallace, William Wright, two colored boys, went down in an alley to have it out.

"Well, you went down in that alley to fight, didn't you?" was asked of Benjamin.

"Yes, sir," he meekly replied.

"And you had your fight, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir, we did."

Benjamin swore that he didn't want to fight and was just "driven and dragged" around that corner and made to fight.

Wallace told the same story. How they both came together under these circumstances was difficult to understand, but his honor thought them both guilty and they were fined for fifteen days.

Officer Ryan, the police court's guardian angel, then brought in five quite respectable looking colored men whom he had arrested for congregating on the sidewalk in front of the court house, which is against a rule of the court.

LECTURED BY THE COURT.

Mr. Flynn told the court he had a great deal of trouble this morning, and that he had warned these men to move on several times without effect.

An array of counsel stepped up as the case was called, and after hearing counsel's remarks, which were mixed up with flattery and condemnation of Mr. Flynn's watchfulness, the judge let the men off with a lecture about loafing in front of the court.

Emma Teaman and Louise Tyler, two dusky damozels of Bloodfield, were brought up for being drunk and disorderly. Emma blamed Louise, and Louise said that Emma caused all the trouble.

The officer claimed that they both made so much noise "he couldn't hear himself think," and in order that the officer of the law should not appear to be disturbed in his quiet meditations, his honor fined them the usual amount.

SENTENCED FOR ASSAULT.

William Kenny was in the police court this morning on two charges of assault, against Policeman John Kinnaman and a young man named Sullivan.

It was alleged in the Sullivan case that the plaintiff was walking down Twenty-eighth street in Georgetown last evening when Kenny approached him with an oath and dealt him a severe blow in the face. A stick was also used by the prisoner and Sullivan exhibited cuts and bruises due to the blows to the scrutiny of the court.

"I ran up Twenty-eighth street, stated Sullivan, and told Officer Kinnaman of the assault. The policeman went back with me, because I was afraid of the Red Bill gang of which this man is a member, and several of the gang were on the corner."

COL. CROFTON SHOT.

First Lieut. Pague Fired Three Times at Him.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Col. R. E. A. Crofton, of the United States Army, was shot at and wounded yesterday afternoon at Fort Sheridan by First Lieut. Pague.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon, while the colonel was reviewing dress parade, Lieut. Pague, who had been confined in the hospital, came upon the parade ground and fired three shots at his superior officer.

The first shot went wide of its mark, the second went through the colonel's coat and the third grazed his abdomen.

Pague would have fired again had not the colonel jumped from his horse and grappled with him. Lieut. Pague had been drinking and was practically a maniac. Being so much younger and stronger than Col. Crofton, the latter was no match for him, and was thrown to the ground before Lieut. W. H. Plog and others rushed to his rescue and disarmed the would-be murderer.

As soon as Lieut. Pague was subdued an ambulance was called to remove the wounded colonel, and Pague himself was escorted to the guardhouse, where he is now being closely watched. Why the young lieutenant should have attempted to take the life of his colonel seems to be something of a mystery, though it is known that he is hardly responsible for his actions.

Mr. Pague is addicted to drink, and has on two occasions been in the infirmary of the establishment for drunkards at Dwight. It appears that he has lately returned to his old habits, and was to-day in the army hospital getting rid of the effects of his last spree. In some way he got past the hospital guards and was not missed until after the shooting occurred.

The affair has caused great excitement at Fort Sheridan, and the escape of Col. Crofton, who is the commandant at the post, from death is considered miraculous. The wound received by the officer is painful, though not thought to be serious.

The Safest Place.

Gen. Lee told an amusing story this morning to a reporter. When he was about to deliver his address at the Confederate reunion in Craig county recently some one came to him and asked him if he would not speak to an old colored man who wished to speak to him. The general consented, and the old negro, whose name was Sam, and who had fought throughout the war, came and received the proffered hand. Gen. Lee at once began to put questions to the old fellow, who answered with wonderful skill. The general then asked him where he had seen the first time during the war. "At Chickamauga," at once replied the "darky," "because I ran so soon as the firing began."

"But how did you know which way to run in such a hot battle?" asked Gen. Lee, with a merry twinkle in his eye.

"I went directly to the safest place and the first I could find," answered Sam, coming to his climax.

Again he was asked how he could tell which place was safe.

"I knowed it was safe," replied Sam, "cause I skipped for de place whar de general was."

Gen. Lee enjoyed the joke, and laughed heartily at the darky's wit. —Charlottesville Chronicle.
