Yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock the original worker drove up to the house with, a load of manure in a wagon. Mr. Holland net him as he was about to come up the steps and told him that be was too late, at the same time showing him that the work had been done.

The man became angry and demanded that r. Holland give him a quarter of a dollar, Mr. Honam green for his trouble.

Mr. Hediand refused point blank to pay a cent. Epon hearing the refusal the negro caught hold of Mr. Holland by the aboulders and shook him. Mr. Holland broke away and ordered the negro off his premises.

He refused and Mr. Holland pushed him from the steps to the curb and then turned to go back into his house.

Before going up the steps he turned to look if the negro was leaving.

Just at that moment, the man quickly took a spade out of the back of the wagon and harled it at Mr. Holland. The distance between the men was about fifteen feet.

The sharp end of the spade cut through a derby hat that Mr. Holland had on, and penetrated to the cranium. He fell upon the grass, and the negrofied.

Mrs. Holland witnessed the deed. She ran out on the steps and tried to life her prostrated hesband. Weakened by the sight of blood and the death-like appearance of her husband she could not lift him. She cried out, and nearly swooned.

Two gentleman, who were in the vicinity, heard the cry and ran to Mrs. Holland assistance. They carried Mrs. Holland into the house, and afterwards summoned Dr. Starch of 144 E street northeast, and bruggists Tyrce and Cline whose establishment is at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and First street.

CONCUSSION OF THE BRAIN.

Dr. Storch examined the wound and found that the skull was not fractured, but that concussion of the brain had set in. He dressed the glaring gap and had Mr. Holland placed in bed.

CUSHING WAS INJURED. Torpedo Boat Received Bard Knocks on Her Recent Trip.

The torpedo boat Cushing sustained some pretty severe knocks from ice during her trip from New York to Washington by the inland route last week.

Most of the damage came from the three inches of ice in the Susquehanna River, which the little vessel was obliged to cut through. Several plates were knocked off and the framesholding the torpedo tubes were bent. In addition to this the torpedo tube compartment became full of water.

The Cushing is now at the Washington navy yard where she will be repaired.

Jacob, anative of Venezueia, and presumably a sympathizer, escaped from the Bruish embassy hat Saturday afternoon.

A reward was offered for his capture and yesterday morning he was returned a prisoner. He was seen by a Times reporter and said?

"It's all right, it's all right."

He showed a disinchination to be interviewed further by refusing to utter a sylable. The incident became public property by the insertion in a local paper of the following:

Jacob is a bandsome green South American parrot, with a long and hamitant tall. He is the special friend of Str Julian Panucetote, the British minister, it is said, and a general favorite about the bousehold. Still "Jacob is very bad, very bad," say the members of the legation.

HOW JACOB GOT LOST.

Jacob ured of flying about the room and disgusted with England's attitude on the venezuelan question, sammered with an emoted air out on the great baleony that arches the driveway in from of the house. He vertured far toward the edge of the awful precipice of some fifteen feet. Whether he grew dizzy in looking over or whether he determined to kill himself, is not known, and Jacob himself declines to say, though he can talk far better than the ordinary run of parrots.

Anyhow, he fell, or fluttered, to the asphalt walk below. Jacob looked back at the fifteen feet of balcony above him and looked at the wide, wide world before him. He chose the latter and strailed about in the yard for a while. Then the Christmas bustle of Connecticut avenue lared him andhesailledforth, half flying, half walking. Then it was Jacob found that the world is not all so nice as Connecticut avenue looks to be from an embassy front yard.

He screamed at the top of his voice, and ran from under a cab only to marrowly escape being translated to the parrot heaven by the foot of a street car horse. A boy threw a stone at him and he grabbed his breath as a bicycle whirled past.

Little Willie Ashton, who lives half-way up the block, saw him about an hour after he left the fifteen feet of balcony and caughrhim. Jacob was weary and diagusted and early sig milled his desire to form a friendly alliance with Willie.

Meanwhile there was consternation in the household down on the corner. Jacob's disappearance had been discovered and it was feared he had taken state secrets with him. A search was made for him from cellar to garret. In fact, it did not ston at the latter place, but the lexation servants were ordered to clamb on the roof and to poke sticks and call down the chimneys. But Jacob could not be found. As a last resert they advertised for him in the newspapers.

Willie's mamma read the advertisement and, though Willie's town the hold that the parrot was boarding with him. Radford, the botter, forsot his hat in his anxiety to meet Jacob. When he reached the door of Willie's house the parrot saw him.

of Alexander Dean, of Alexandra, was probably fatally injured by jumping from a moving freight train in which he was stealing a ride yesterday. The front of the boy's skull was crushed in, and his death is expected at any moment.

The boy had been playing in the neighborhood of his home in Patrick street, between Cameron and Queen streets, and about 5:30 o'clock went to the Lafayette street station of the Southern railway to meet his father, who is employed at the Washington Ordinance Foundry.

The father, having returned to Alexandria on an early train, the son did not meet him. Winfred remained at the station till the 6:15 train started for Washington, when he climbed about ten miles an hour, and was reached the train was going at the rate of about ten miles an hour, and was rapidly gathering headway. A hundred yards further on, just back of Mason's wall, the boy jumped off, but the train was then moving so rapidly that he was thrown violently down a steep emisanhem, and it is supposed that his head minst have struck the end of a tie or stone.

When aid reached him he was unconscious and gasping, the entire trout of his skull was erushed in trou the eyes back, and blood was gushing from the wound. He was tenderly peaced up, placed in a wagon and carried to his home.

Dr. Hambiton was the first one to reach him, and he saw at a giance that the boy's condition was hopeless, and that his death was only a question of a few hours. Dr. William M. Smith also arrived in a tew immites, and in order to sew up the great gash in his head, from which the brain was sozing, it was necessary to remove a portion of the frontal bone. "I am nighly in favor of any movement that will give other nations to understanu that we are one among them. I feel we are quite as much interested in affairs on this continent as England, or any other European country could possibly be, and I certainly believe in the right and justness of the Monroe doctrine. However, I think the entire question will be adjusted and without war."

and the United States to make war upon each other, and such a triffing matter as the boundary line of Venezuela, where no great amount of territory is involved, and good feeding of both the people of the United States and Great Britain would not allow such a thing to happen.

"It may be that we have reached a point in the development of our national urreer when it is necessary to give emphatic and unmistalcible expression to the determination of this nation to assist and maintain the Monroe doctrine, but it would be a stigma upon our Christianity for the two leading Christian mations of the world to plunge latto a war until the recourses of diplomacy have been exhausted."

plunge into a war until the recourses of diplomacy have been exhausted."

REV. CHARLES A. STAKELY. First Baptist Church:

"It would be of immense advantage to the world if all international dispute could be settled by arbitration. War should never be thought of except in defense of some great principle, and then only as a last resort. It may sometimes be necessary in the interest of peace.

"The Monroe doctrine, if L understand it correctly and fully, is worth defending, even to the extent of going to war. If this should be found necessary. No peace can be sweet or valuable that is purchased at the expense of honor and safety."
