"My Dear Old Mother."

The illustrious Virginia General at the head of the Vandal horde, now gathering in Washington for the invasion of this Commonwealth, was in this city on the 22d of February 1858, on the occasion of the inauguration of the Washington statue. He was formally received by the Speaker of the House of Delegates, and welcomed to his native State. In reply to the Speaker's address, he said among other things, as we find reported in the papers of the day, the following :

"Virginia has always taken a lively interest in those of he me who have endeavored will in the cause of the Common-walth. It has been my fortune to be benefitted by that paternal feeling. I have had conferred upon me bigh bosons, the recol lection of which I have ever cheriabed. Soon after the end of the war of 1815, i had conferred upon me, by the Legislature of the State, a sword of honor-a beautiful taken of approval, which, i egret to say, I have not with me at this time. The sword I have did me the honor to confer upon me a gold medal, which would a t forth the distinction by which I had gained the approbation of upon him by his "dear old mother." In 1814, she paid him the eminent compliment of calling a county by his the face of the earth could have imagined it possible, after such an exhibition, that this same honored and grate full son would be found gathering an army-of desperdoes and rullians to invade the soil, destroy the liberties and ravage and lay waste the homes and fields of the There is a set of virtues which partake of the nature of duties, and confer no especial credit on the possessor of them. Honesty in man and chastity in woman are of this character. It is a simple duty to be chaste and the one and a rogue of the other, and entails infamy and shame on both. In like manner, there is a set of sentiments, recognized in all ages and by all civilized nations, as binding on the actions of every honorable man. Tuey are not the results of reason-but the instincts of a manly, honorable and ingenuous nature. The seninfamous by mankind. This judgment is not to be asoned about or reasoned away : it rests on the imperishable basis of the better instincts of human nature General Scott, with all his laurels, cannot escape its widespread universal and invincible force. The hand that clorned him might strip him of his plumes. Virginia might recall the sword and the medal she has given; she might revoke the complimentary resolutions she has adopted-she might, imitating a Revolutionary example, when the propis of Shenandouh, then called Dunmore, refused to live in "a county bearing the name of such a ther" would be perfectly justifiable, and it would inflict an intense disgrace; but we doubt if it would be half so keenly felt by the renegade bimself as that sense of loathing which he feels attends the name of traiter in every quarter of the civilized world, and which he knows will haunt him by day and night to his dving breath.

The ancients had a saying that no man was happy till his death. The Hero of Chippewa and Lundy's Lane is a living illustration of this antique apothem. When all the neble and chivalrous spirits of the Federal service were abandoning the flag which had become the badge of despotism, and flying to the rescue of liberty and their native State, he, oblivious of every sense of duty to his "dear old mother," remained with her enemies, to organize armies for her invasion and de-plation. It is not worth while to inquire whether he was prompted by vanity, avarice or ambition. He has chosen his part. He must be a parricide, or he must betray the cause which he ha now esponsed. He can never again put foot up n the soil that gave him birth, except as an invader, or a traitor with a rope around his neck. To any feeling mind, would not death be a thousand times preferable to suc

Yankeedoodledom. In whatever direction we turn we are met by a mass of contradictions. They tell us that the South is a political and social nuisance and a pecuniary drawback on the mighty North-and yet, rather than consent to a separation from it, they are willing to pour forth their blood, and, what is far more precious than their blood, their money. They profess the intimest devotion to free press and free speech, free every thing-and they have extinguished all freedom among themselves, and Liccoln cannot proceed fast enough for them in establishing a despotism. He has substantially abolished the Constitution—he has raised armies, without authority and against law-he has suspended the writ of A WORD FOR MOTHERS.

To the Editor of the Whig:

Some few days since, in conversation with a young man, I learned that he had not joined, nor did he intend joining, any volunteer company. He assigned as a reason that his mother, who is a native born Virginian, objected to his "going" Now I learn there are a few onther cases of the same sort. What, I would ask, is the case of this foolish, sickly, chimney-corner affiction of such mothers? What can any right-minded woman think with one universal outery over the outraged flag of the Union—as tho' that flag was theirs, and they had not always refused to uphold it, when assealed by foreign powers. This is the prosent subject-matter of their natividic.

Away with enlisted for the war, and five hundred millions of dollars are at their service to arm, clothe and feed them! We turn to the advertising columns of these same papers and we find whole pages of advertisements, headed "solutive for enlistment. All are very particular in stating: "pay and subsistence from the time of culisiment—a greated in the service of the shaving families." In Boston, it is benefit to those having families." In Boston, it is considered necessars to stimulate the popular enthusiasm.

and East Bridgewater Companies, which were to leave for Fortress Montoe, on yesterday atternoon, in the steamer Pembroke, refused to enlist for three years, and should be permitted to reb, plunder and prey upon the rich cities of the North. Openly and above-board, the knaves of the Cotton States were told months ago that if they would band together in sufficient numbers, Washingtor, Philadelphia, and even New York itself, should be given them to plunder and rob. On this p'edge, and without the hope or expectation of other pay, not less than 50,000 men are this day enlisted in the "free bands" of the Confederacy; and mest of them are already moving North. Another 50,000 are being raised upon similar promises; and ere long, they, too, will be moving northward to participate in the promised work of punder. Already do the leaders of this Robber Band talk of passing by Washington and making a bold push at Fhiladelphia. And why not? If we were in command pashing by Washington and making a bold rush at Fhird adalphica. And why not? If we were in command of it with the purposes and principles of its leaders, we should not hesitate a moment to pass by Washington, where there is no plunder to obtain (this is Colonel Webb speaking—he is death on plunder)—no banks to tob, no rich stores of gold and silver to despoil, or wealthy crizens to lay under contributions—and make a rush upon Philadelphic. We, (the gallant Webb), in such a position and guided by the principles of the piratical leaders of the Rebel States would not waste our energical upon the capture of the Capital; but faithful to our promises to our the Capital; but faithful to our promises to our should lead them at once to the plunder and the sa.king of Nerthern cities, which constituted their inducement to follow us. And Jeff, Davis, and Brauregard, and the other traitor officers of our army, who have taken service with the rebels, are just the men to inaugurate such a President. New York was in, but did not voic. The with the rebels, are just the men to inaugurate such a warfare. It is easier for this army of Fr ebooters, concentrated at Harper's Ferry, to march ou and pillage Polladelphia than it would be to capture Washington. In fact, the one is perfectly feasible, the other almost impracticable. Savy thousand men or more, well armed and equipped, builded together by the promises of their own independence, under their own flag and their own flag shall be germited to suck Northern. and equipped, bunded together by the promises of their leaders that they shall be permitted to suck Northern ties, demanding that their leaders re feem their pledges. So speaks the redoubtable and terrifi d Col. Webb through two or more colubus.

A letter from Chesapeake Bay to the N. Y. Comm ial gives us to understand, that Pendergast is disposed o imitate the example of his illustribus predecessor, Arnold, and organize predatory excursions along the Vir ginia rivers. The writer cays:

DEAR BROTHER. Yesterday we opened the war of 1861 in this State. "The Yankee" attempted to pass up the river about 1 o'clock P. M. when we fired a shot across her bow. She continued her course up the river and we immediately opened on her with the rifled gun, the shell gun and two old from Cpds which we found here. She was two and s-half miles off, and consequently was about out of reach for three of our pieces. The rankee re-turned our fire and lodged a thirty-two pound ball (which turned our fire and lodged a thirty-two pound ball (which is lying at my feet) a short distance from our baker; when we heard it flying over our heads there was som quick quatting and aving fitt, I can tell you.

Captain Brown said be never saw men stand fire better.

Captain Brown said he never saw men stand are better; he was delighted with our conduct, and praised us highly. Most of the bails from the Yankee fell store, and mone of them touched us; the fired six times and perhaps oftener; I did not myself count but six; then she concluded that discretion was the better part of valor and retreated. She could not possibly have passed up the river, as it is only three-fourths of a mile wide between our battery only three-fourths of a mile wide between our battery and Yorktown and had the attempt been made, she would have been sunk. We had no battery erected, nor our guns placed in possitior, when we saw her in the distance; we drew our guns out on the beach, where there was a little sand bank, sufficient with the aid of pine bushes to hide our guns, but not to protect our men, but have we waited her approach and found her when and there we waited her approach, at d fought her when she came. I was very sorry our captain did not let her get closer before he opened on her, but he obeyed instructions, therefore we cannot complain of him and i deed should not, for he acted as calmly as if he was

We think, indeed feel confident, that three of our balls took effect, and Mr. Douglass, who was on the other side of the river and quite close to her, says that she was actually struck.
