POETRY. "MARSE ROBERT IN ASLEEP." BY MISS B. VALENTINE.

[A Gray Coat man to his friend, a Blue Coat, the following incident of the war: General Lee, sorely fatigued by a hard day's march, sat down to rest by the roadside, when a moon shined brightly on his face, and he observed him as he slept, whispered warnings to his horses, and then passed from man to man the line of march—Southern Historical Papers.]

Had you heard the distant trumpets On that glorious summer day? Had you seen our comrades rallying To meet us on the way? On the western border of the land, The military camp, As down the line that could not run, "Marse Robert is asleep!"

Give me your hand, O Virginia! Let's talk of this war-time day. For the prettiest rank of all the war, 'Twas this rank and die— 'Twas the passing of that army! When he was laid to rest, 'Twas those men from crying out, "Hurrah! Marse Robert is asleep!"

There lay that knightly figure, One hand upon his sword, The other pointing to his heart, The other pointing to a word, The laurel leaves had fluttered down, For lovers their vigils keep, And crowding in, though I think they knew "Marse Robert is asleep!"

In glorious Old Westminster, No monument of war, No marble story, half so grand As this, our army say, Success is an infant's smile, and the most generous on all occasions; and if I had to build a church, or buy a pauper, or found an asylum of any kind, I would call on you in preference to any one else.

As this, our army say, Success is an infant's smile, and the most generous on all occasions; and if I had to build a church, or buy a pauper, or found an asylum of any kind, I would call on you in preference to any one else.

000. There is a general air of thrift and progress that gives Staunton quite a city air; a great deal of noise on the streets; busy people, hurrying to and fro; people walking every way; and many fine buildings rushing through, being directly on the line of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, which flows in an immense business throughout the entire year.
